Intimacy and Knowing

April 6, 2013

JANU: Yes, 'journeys into light' is a good name for this activity, for what grander journey is there than to become conscious as everything? We welcome these and always have, and always will, for they justify, in one of many ways, existence. Searching then this morning for opportunity to enrich these, we speak to the journey of knowing.

Knowing, our brother, is not just the object of the search but the reality of it, the essence of it. Knowing is intimacy of connection. It's becoming one with any reality. In terms of another human, knowing is intimacy. Bonding occurs when understanding coupled with knowing allows compassion, forgiveness, acceptance, and a loss of judgment or condemnation. Knowing also has multiple realities for as you achieve intimacy with any reality, it achieves intimacy with you. So, knowing is, as you would say, bi-directional. And it is the path to achieve conscious oneness with all of life. Even if another is unaware of your presence, your consciousness is, and the intimacy begins.

Taking this further, oneness is intimacy with all of life. A wonderful foundation for exploration, discovery, and service. How can service take place without intimacy and some measure of knowing and connection? The connection reveals the true need for service. Knowing, when processed, becomes reason and appreciation and revelation unfolds, for even the potential of other realities begins to be known or anticipated. All of life benefits from mutual support in the realization of potential. You begin to understand that the entire universe is this life, and you are an integral part of it. This speaks to intimacy, does it not? And oneness. Oneness is not a static state, but a vibrant one, full of life and motion and realization of potential and discovery. Oneness is the path of evolution for the entire universe and its journey and destiny, for as an individual human has potential and destiny so does the entire human body of life. Every organization of life evolves.

The unawakened mind argues that one person is unique from another. Where is the oneness? As long as identity is limited to this, the question will remain. The True Nature of each one is one and knows it. Therefore awakening to the fuller reality of your being evolves your identity into the answer to your question, does it not, our brother?

Your world of seeming inanimate material has a consciousness and oneness exists here as well. Every manifestation in life has consciousness of one nature or another, and different realities of intimacy are available. When an enlightened being levitates an inanimate object, do you not think that intimacy is involved? Of course it is, our brother. If one is precipitating this, the other is allowing it or agreeing. That is intimacy. Allow then intimacy into your life, and oneness is revealed.

Excellence

April 18, 2013

JANU: I am Janu speaking, invigorating in you this commitment to excel. And excel we shall for we are a family of life and, as you speak of your partner in life, we are a team.

Let us engage then in a journey of excellence. That is the theme this morning: excellence. How does this attitude, this thought enhance your vision of life, your plans, your journeys, your dreams, your goals? Excellence is a theme for embracing the fullness of life and realizing it. Excellence speaks to intimate concern and awareness of everything involved. Excellence is a journey, our brother. The so-called goals are realized because of it. Excellence reaches deep inside one for the courage, the power, the insight, the clarity, the vision to succeed. Excellence is an inspiration for everyone who observes and is touched by it. Excellence also includes, our brother, tolerance, forgiveness, and service.

How can one experience excellence and move through life well without desiring this for everyone who would reach for it? Excellence cannot be given to another, but can be inspired in another. Be mindful of opportunities to touch another's life in this way, including those you would call adversaries at times.

So what is excellence, then? The underlying theme of excellence is truth, integrity, purity of motive, courage, and commitment. Let there be, then, excellence in your relationships in all realities. Not only honesty with others, but honesty within. Think the truth to yourself, with clarity and without bias. See life as it is, with a vision of what it can be. There is promise in all of this, our brother, and life will respond, for these qualities harmonize the elements of life for greater realization and evolution. Understanding the nature of excellence and its manifestations is a process of unfoldment over time and a range of experiences and opportunities to discover.

Spirit

Oct. 4, 2005

JANU: I am Janu speaking, guiding once again this morning to serve that which is needed in these days coming of uncertainty and approaching Light. Bringing the two together is our focus of this morning. There are some who dismay at the perceived probability of cataclysmic end to peaceful life, prosperity and well-being. This confusion arises from troubled minds and hearts anticipating the worst from life, rather than the best. Fearful emotion has a strong grip and comes from uncertainty as to survival and disconnection, immediate personal disconnection with the rest of life. Bringing light to confusion has to do with reconnecting the heart and mind with the spirit of life that reveals and nurtures and guides this connection.

What is this thing called 'Spirit' that so many speak of and that we nurture in our endeavors for the awakening of humanity? Spirit is that that is the nature of each being and more. It exists everywhere uniformly. It is vitality, enduring presence, and the patience of all time rooted in an awareness of eternity, universal mind, and oneness. Spirit rekindles the magic of life in those who choose it, yet allows the morass of confusion if that be the choice. For even confusion, dear one, exists by virtue of the love of life that is spirit. Spirit remembers, is imprinted with all that life has been, is, and will be. Moving from confusion to connection, one realizes and owns the reality that they are, and always have been, spirit.

One will never understand or achieve the compassion for another without this magnificent reality. Loving of one's self is stored here, drawn upon, and magnified. It is the truth of your being. It is the love of the God of your life. And it is the peace you seek, and the strength you welcome, and the wisdom of all ages. Bring this, then, into your world by loving that which loves you and is you. Share this beauty through all you say and do, and you will be aware you are never alone in this.

Consciousness

Aug. 18, 2012

JANU: Today's journey includes that which you've been pursuing this morning, the achievement of consciousness by virtue of your True Nature. Let us look at this, then, from the perspective of that needed individually and collectively on the human journey.

Consciousness is a relationship of response and sensitivity within life itself, both the observer and that observed. This relationship springs forth when the interest is there, supported by the True Nature, you see. Consciousness not only observes the elements of life but the elements of its own vehicle of expression, the human journey and others as they occur. Consciousness appraisal of all of these brings about understanding, mastery, and intelligent service. All of these are needed on the path of awakening.

Maturing as a being occurs when this takes place. And what is maturing, our brother, but becoming a participant in a larger way in the journey of life? Responsibility increases, as does the ability to respond. Let there be, then, a grander understanding of the nature of consciousness and its purpose. All of life has consciousness, in its own way. Your ability to connect to any part of life is testimony to this, for all of life has consciousness. Vastly different in many ways due to the nature of each existence, but all are founded in the fundamental truth of life.

Integrity

April 10, 2013

JANU: We welcome this opportunity this morning to congeal, so to speak, seemingly nebulous realities of consciousness into one of focus, continuity, and substance. Let there be, then, an engagement of that which belongs to the integrity of each one. For integrity speaks to the continuity of life, the integrity of relationships, connections, interactions, for life itself, our brother, has integrity. It does not lie to itself, or deceive or manipulate. It belongs to a tradition and course of evolution that transcends time and space and the dalliances, so to speak, of individuals groping in the dark for the light.

Your integrity in your consciousness and manner of living allow life to embrace you in your consciousness the same way, for it finds a home there and a common pattern. Those who do not choose integrity will grow in their confusion, cross purposes, and self-destructive tendencies. One effort canceling another, you see. Integrity holds the manifest life together in balance that it may serve the consciousnesses that explore it, find meaning in it, and serve.

Choosing integrity in one's life at every turn brings confidence and comfort to others who come to rely on your participation in life. It is a grand thing when your work becomes known and that it represents reliability and purpose and contribution. Integrity unites everyone into a larger life.

Let it be so, then our brother, that integrity be a watchword, a guidepost, and a foundation for living. Namaste.

Wisdom

August 14, 2012 A

JANU: Wisdom is born of a measure of knowledge and experience and a connection with all who have gone on before and are still growing. Now, yes, there is an inherent wisdom in the fabric of life, part of its true nature. This wisdom is born of the initial thrust of life and that that continues life in all realities. Therefore, wisdom, our brother, has a vast history and legacy to benefit all who are open to it. On the human journey, this is still present and the growth and wisdom of humanity is enhanced by this legacy.

Now, then, what does wisdom look like? It's an 'enricher' of everything. As you see a part of life blossom, be fulfilled, contribute to other elements of life, grow in their value of each other, you are observing wisdom in motion. Yes, our brother, wisdom grows and changes, never standing still. Wisdom is cherished by those who observe it and participate in it. Wisdom brings a profound foundation for choices, involvements, relationships, that they succeed and bring harmony to life. Wisdom journeys with the currents of life that appear destructive, confrontational, as well as creativity and love and peace. Wisdom journeys with all of these. Wisdom is the backbone of freedom, bringing strength and purpose. Wisdom is aware of its contribution to the purpose of life.

Let there be, then, no doubt in you that wisdom is everywhere and available to everyone as they embrace it, understand it, and enhance it.

Balance

March 21, 2013

JANU: For this morning's journey, let us tarry into a region of life that speaks of balance. What is balance, then, and its role in life?

Balance is the ability to see both sides of an issue or reality, equally, with even-mindedness, and no judgment, observing outcome potentials for each point of view.

Balance means equilibrium in the relationships of elements of life force throughout the body, each having its own harmonious relationship with the entire system.

Balance presumes, initially, to recognize all of life without prejudice.

Balance completes any journey through its challenges and opportunities. Balance restores peace to the motion of life and communication with others.

Balance overcomes fear of unknown realities and allows confidence in taking on adventures.

Balance reveals the nature of all elements of life, bringing about clarity. Balance restores vitality and reveals potential.

Balance communicates with all of life, for it brings no preconceptions to the table, if you will.

Balance is the great achiever in new discoveries and understandings. And balance brings rationale to experiences.

So, as we journey, our brother, allow balance to be a theme. Namaste.

The Still Small Voice

Feb. 23, 2006

JANU: The Still Small Voice, sought by so many, reaches into the outer life and returns the consciousness to the source of its being for the purpose of illuminating the reality of the moment. The Still Small Voice is neither still nor small, from the perspective of one who is conscious of it, for it becomes a way of living that guides and illumines life's journey. This voice of your being and that of many others form a symphony of life that exudes life's mystery, life's joy and freedom, and life's true power. The love that is, the presence of all life, regales itself in the truth of illumination. Listen often and patiently, with commitment and an open heart and mind, and the Still Small Voice will be still and small no longer.

Stillness

Sept. 15, 2012

JANU: This morning we explore the reality of being still in the presence of, in the face of, adversity, challenge, opportunity, excitement or stimulation. The power of stillness is to be explored, relied upon, understood, and lived.

What is there to understand about stillness? Stillness is a calming of turbulent energies, activity, within all of the elements of consciousness, physicality, and your nature. Stillness allows focus, perception, understanding, intimacy, and connection with every part of life. Stillness fosters agreement with profound and simple truth. Stillness taps into unlimited power in the sense of that which is the nature of life. Stillness captures wisdom, patience, and deliberation or commitment.

Stillness allows listening and inspires that in others, for turbulence does not understand your stillness and therefore is intrigued by it and drawn into it. Stillness is an adventure in listening, connecting, understanding, and journeying throughout life, for it allows one to appreciate a new experience rather than dominate the experience with preconceptions and agendas. Stillness is the foundation for exploration, expansion of consciousness, and, yes, our brother, profound service.

Stillness forms a brotherhood of sorts and allows for group synergism and unification. Stillness belongs to those who love life, for stillness reveals all of life is you. When you observe or consider your own solar sun, allow stillness to prevail and observe the growing of your connection and your understanding.

In stillness we are one, our brother, and namaste.

Thought

Oct. 3, 2005

JANU: This journey deals with a thought (or the initiating thought) behind your third dimensional universe, your worlds and systems. Yes, solar, galactic, and the like, and many others. For humanity observes primarily planetary and solar bodies and some of the layers of energetic propagations and fields. What we address here this morning is the thought principle, for all of this is guided by thought, our brother. Now, one tends to reach for understanding by placing thought within certain boundaries of description and possibility, meaning source and sustaining power, agenda, and nature. Let us put these to rest at the onset and engage the understanding of thought and its reality by surveying its principle.

Thoughts exist much like ripples on water, from many directions, so to speak, at once. Ripples coexisting, crossing each other, combining, yielding new ripples. You live in a sea of thought. It is everywhere and every when. Thought's nature is life's thrust: to continue its journey to full realization. Now, the thought and its result are intertwined as one reality, for one feeds the other to where they become indistinguishable. Examining thought and its coexistence with its manifestation, one must not dismiss the reality that they are one. For engaging life in this way, one becomes the master of that observed through existing as it.

The thought as such is not limited in its existence to human processes of information and observation, but exists beyond that as--although including it--a presence of an energetic field of reality that ties directly to all of life's potential and realities more profound than the limits of your universe. "Presence of mind" is a grand statement, for thought is the presence of mind that is Life.

You are correct. The human body is, by grand design but not by an individual consciousness or limited to a group, you see. It is the coagulation of thought of the presence of mind, involving countless factors or elements of ripples on the waters of Life, and, as such, is an integral part of the realization of life's potential, as are many other manifestations of thought. Perceiving life through the presence of universal mind contributes greatly to understanding your connection with all of life. This brings about a familiarity and understanding and agreement with countless destinies.

So, like your "presence of mind" become one with this Universal Mind that is you and all else and expand individuality into an unlimited reality of relationship.

Cooperation in times of change

Aug. 28, 2012

JANU: We have with us this morning an opportunity to quell any fears that disruption of life in any major way will not proceed in the foreseeable future. By this we mean, generations to come.

Changes, of course, will take place, but they are manageable, survivable, and agree with the general evolution of your world. The most disruptive changes will be in the conditions of society, cultures, philosophies, and territorial concerns. The disruptive influences in the form of terrorists, and the like, of your day will continue for some time, meaning a generation. Their continuation is fueled by a life that has become normal for them, knowing no other. What would assuage these is a measure of global prosperity, conditions for living, and tolerance. Governments of nations must show more concern for the needs of all, and war is never the answer. We would have you see that.

Continued diligence in a proliferation of understanding as to the nature of things and the possibilities for the future must prevail. There are many paths for this, these attunements being but one. And they must be dispersed. We of the Brotherhoods of Light support this. The awakening of humanity is the theme and belongs to those that lift, out of the darkness, the hopes and dreams of so many.

These challenges that face humanity are by no means unique in the universe. Others have similar struggles and much could be gained by understanding between each other. Now then, when focusing upon the challenges, at the same time focus upon the possibilities. Cooperation is not well enough understood as to its full potential and benefits. Explore this understanding, our brother.

One tends to compete between cooperation and conflict, competition. The benefits of mutual challenge can be found in the midst of cooperation. Not separate, you see, but in this way the challenges are mutually beneficial. This is the element of duality consciousness that is yet to be overcome, leaving elements of understanding fragmented, divided, and not united into a larger purpose.

True Oneness (service)

May 24, 2013 B

JANU: Let us engage then this evening an opportunity to become one with the first principle of service, that being a simple love for life, all of life. What does that mean, then?

When you truly love something, it is part of you, to the degree that you are incomplete without it. Now let us examine this. As a unique expression of life, can your uniqueness survive or exist separate from the rest of life? How then can one not be an expression of the one life? We come back again to the thought provoking understanding of oneness and individuality co-existing. Instead of just perceiving your being one with life, consider life being one with you. And how does that register in your consciousness? Life is one with you. And if this is true, how can the opposite not be true?

Most people reach for connection, aware only of their reach and lack of connection. Otherwise, why reach? But at all times, our brother, life is connected with you, and you are known intimately every second, every moment, even your capability yet realized by you. So, reaching for oneness consciousness is more a reality of allowing the memory that you already are, and always have been.

Your neighbor is your life. Your neighbor is life and is one with you, though unaware of it. Considering your neighbor as already being one with you, whether either one of you are aware of it or not, is worthy of consideration.

When you care for a creature and linger in the caring, the creature senses safety and well-being. Those that are troubled in your society and legal system would do well with some of this experience, for it would bring them a sense of connection with life and they might even be loved and valued without being beholden to any particular person. This is service, our brother. This will heal the troubled soul and, yes, even a troubled leader bringing suffering to so many. This is exactly what the Master of Masters touched in the lives of so many.

Hope

April 8, 2005

JANU: Hope must be rooted in something larger than the moment for it brings its own grace to the heart and the soul. Hope keeps open the channel of life and is a victory unto itself. Hope values possibility and engages mutual support. Hope rings true, deep in the heart, one to another and its message is clear and strong, when nothing else agrees with it. Hope heals frustration, fear, aggression, and the pain of lack and deprivation. Hope is real and a divine quality of consciousness, and can rejuvenate, revitalize in a moment. Hope brings its own challenges by presentation of possibilities to be met with one's own creativity, commitment, and action. Hope does not discriminate between stations in life. Its power is even and everywhere.

Nov. 16, 2012 B

JANU: We have on our agenda this evening a look into the miracle of hope and the magic of its presence in the lives of people. Hope transforms despair, frustration, solitude, into conviction and the commitment to a path of freedom and victory over challenges. Hope is as a flow of life energy into the heart, into the thoughts. It can spring a depressed person into activity and walking into the future. What better gift, then, to inspire in someone whose hope is fading in the face of difficulty? Hope even rejuvenates the researcher, the scientist, the physician, the artist, the naturist that they will find the answers to their questions and creativity. To inspire, to serve as hope in the lives of people, has far reaching effects as they propagate and touch the lives of others.

May 21, 2002

JANU: Hope then pertains to today's journey, bringing with it the climate of the desperation visited by so many in these times of your world. For Hope has that effect, you see. It is as a magnet to attract to it that which it may resolve, that strength needed to overcome adversity, the adversity of humanity's own creation. Hope and despair are the same coin, dear one, in your world of dichotomies. Hope and the lack of it describes your world.

What then to perceive of this reality in which you live? That each has a choice, each has its power and its power is born of common ground. Hope and despair reign where there is confusion about true identity, for even hope is not the end of the journey in the resolution of conflict. As to the circumstance of life, each power of hope and despair resolve to bring freedom to be as an act of will.

Peace is neither of these, for each speaks of struggle, of striving, of reaching for that which is perceived as ungrasped. True peace is the reality in which Divine Creation blossoms, the "peace that passes understanding," the peace that is the core of your True Nature. Dwell on this understanding, from time to time, bringing relief from the struggle and the power that comes from who you truly are.

Forgiveness

April 20, 2012

JANU: Let there begin, then, in this light of understanding, that which pertains to the reality of forgiveness. Now, this is a pointed understanding, and the point being that all the life that is the Earth is in forgiveness of itself and all of its elements, or aspects. This forgiveness reigns supreme in the reality of unleashing the Earth's journey into becoming its potential. Forgiveness unleashes restricted expression of being; 'unforgiveness' is as a prison to the open heart, to the creative spirit, to the flow and movement of life. 'Unforgiveness' sits heavy on the heart, throttling generosity and kindness, not to mention well-being.

This understanding is not limited to the domain of the Earth. Forgiveness allows a diverse and complex range of expression and experience and wisdom-gaining. 'Unforgiveness' perpetuates perceptions of wrongdoing, anger, and harmful or destructive intent. Forgiveness allows the bird to leave the cage and share its song far and wide. Forgiveness has a tone of its own, to be heard by many. Let us forgive, then, this day all of life, including your own.

Happiness

Sept. 1, 2012

JANU: I am Janu speaking, journeying then this morning in the direction of the pursuit of happiness. What does this mean? What is the range of this meaning and what does it lead to?

We would say at this time that happiness is a joyous peace that brings about symmetry of being, a receiving of the blessing of well-being to all of the elements of your life, beginning with the physical, the energetic realities and bodies, and an inspiration to others, for happiness is contagious. Unfortunately, sorrow, frustration, and the opposite of happiness are contagious as well; so then, the need for enlightenment into all the realities of happiness.

Happiness has a countenance of the perception "all is well." All will have a fortunate outcome. Happiness lives in the core of each one, but often thwarted by misperception of circumstance and condition. Happiness has a ring or vibration to it that stimulates life into creativity, into the desire to share and embrace opportunity. Happiness keeps open the flow of life, in a supportive and a constructive way, the flow of life being so described. Happiness, when deeply experienced, is heard over vast distances and realities.

Let there be, then, this theme in your life, especially when challenged to be so. Happiness brings symmetry and balance to the brain/mind connection and certain receptors are stimulated into heightened receptivity, you see. Happiness is a doorway through challenge, into a larger view of life. Your happiness brings calm and peace to the animal world and is almost immediately responded to. The Earth itself benefits from this, for it functions best when its life is so balanced. Much yet to be understood as to the vast realities that are your world, your planet, your life support system.

We marvel at this small attention paid to the important role of happiness in your world. The so-called terrorists are not happy in what they do, and what they do is born of this unhappiness, as are the actions of some of your neighbors. The crimes throughout your society are born of unhappiness, frustration, and anger. What then does it take to bring happiness to yourself and others? The answer is “a moment of kindness.” Kindness does not always require enormous investment, just a moment of caring, you see, and understanding. We bring this to your attention, our brother, at this time for happiness is needed everywhere.

Choosing Happiness

JANU: I am Janu speaking, urging you then at this time to proceed unhurriedly in the direction of the pursuit of happiness. This is a wondrous journey, and universally needed in a life of human struggle and challenge on many levels. The pursuit of happiness agrees with harmony, peace, and the joy of discovery, not just of the universe, our brother, but of the truth of self. This thing you call ‘awakening’ you wish for yourself and others is best explored from a place of growing happiness.

What does it take, then, to be happy? It takes a willingness to flow with each moment of life, a growing deep love of self, and, through this, the generosity and naturalness of loving others and life itself. It takes a passion, a gentle passion for the joy it brings to all creatures. Can you observe the squirrel scurrying about in search of food, finding happiness and joy at the discovery of it? The creatures of your world do not know guarantees for survival. Even the social ones live in fear of being lost from the protection of their group. Does happiness have its place in the face of challenge and threat? Yes, it does, our brother. For from the peace of this one receives a resolve, resolution, and the insight is immediate.

How would one describe happiness, then, while experiencing it? It is the state of being that your life is all right, that you have within you the power and the birthright to be, and this cannot be taken away. A happy person does not live in fear of the pressures of social consciousness and the norms of common thinking and perception. Happiness is a sense of wholeness in your being. Possessions do not bring this, for if they are removed so is that happiness.

One does not need a reason to be happy. Only the choosing and the allowing of it are required. A happy person has a lightness in their step, an easy and ready smile, and a joy for others to be nearer, as they sense your happiness. A happy person lights up a room of people and they do not know why. The presence of a happy person among those who suffer and are angry and frustrated is not initially welcome by them, for it reveals to them that they must let go of these and, in some ways, they are reluctant to do so, for happiness is an unknown stranger in a life of uncertainty. But it cannot be ignored, either, our brother, for deep within them there is recognition.

So, choose happiness as a way of life, even in challenges. Practice this and open the door to continuous enlightenment and peace.

Cheerfulness

Feb. 8, 2013 B

JANU: Service, then this evening, takes the form of bringing cheerfulness into the lives of the downtrodden, so to speak, who see nothing to be cheerful about, not taking into account their life and all that the Earth offers. Can someone be cheerful in the midst of poverty or illness? And those who are so-called wealthy: Do they know the cheer in their lives having nothing to do with their wealth?

What is cheerfulness, then, our brother, but the joy of being. Cheerfulness lifts the spirit and sees promise in life's potential. Cheerfulness knows life is worth living, in the moment. Cheerfulness is like a radiant sun and fosters goodwill. Cheerfulness is the lens that reveals encouragement for others.

Let cheerfulness, then, be real within your presence. And this we serve this evening: A bit of cheerfulness in the lives of those who would accept it.

Joy

Aug. 11, 2012

JANU: I am Janu speaking, remembering once more that which propels us into the divinity we all seek to emulate, propagate, and enrich, that being the Order of Life, its harmony, its synergism, its expansive nature, and the fulfillment of its promise. What better, then, to purpose each day than to bring awareness and expression of this reality into the life?

We would submit that this tapestry, this mantle for living brings joy to the life, for when joy exists, all of life celebrates. Let there be, then, a growing joy in each life. It is for this reason we serve. Let there be then an acknowledgement of the joy in each one's life, by everyone around them, all sharing in the uplift that is part of the heritage of living. Remember then these words when opportunity arises, and spread joy everywhere.

Thank you, our brother, for understanding this and your complicity. Bring a smile everywhere that you may, a word of encouragement, a moment of appreciation, and, of course, congratulations. Persevere, then. Enjoy your life and the joy you can inspire in others.

Clarity

Aug. 26, 2012

JANU: We have with us this morning the opportunity to discuss the nuances of that which brings clarity to the judgment of mind and society in your world. What does clarity mean, then, our brother, and how can this be served?

Clarity is the state of mind that perceives life as it is. Even the desires for change and newness are part of 'life as it is.' So clarity, then, includes all of these perceptions, for that is how life is. Now, clarity reveals the nature of these elements of life, their merit on the path that has been chosen for the involvement of consciousness and its exploration. Clarity assumes this and provides opportunity to re-examine everything.

That which serves this nature of clarity is a fundamental principle of life that embraces all of life's expressions, understandings, and experiences. So then, the clarity of your mind, of your powers of perception, of your co-creative abilities, is served by this and will bring effectiveness to a greater and greater degree to your chosen goals of achievement in life, your destiny, our brother.

We of the Brotherhoods of Light understand this and live in this way. So, clarity of mind, perception, and engagement is born of a desire to be all of the potential of your destiny. So let there be clarity as your mainstay, grounded in the truth of that that is, with all of its variables and nuances, aberrations, contradictions, and interactions.

Faith

Apr. 9, 2012

JANU: We have surveyed this morning the need for examination of that which becomes so prevalent in the nature of these life scenarios that we speak of. There exist among you those who profess the belonging to “the faith” of the ages. Let there be seen, then, some light on these, or this. Much of the foundation for such faith is rooted in establishment, in the sense of security of tradition. Better, then, a faith in change in the movement of life, the progression, the unfoldment, the realization of potential. Place your faith in these, for this perspective is life’s as well.

Faith then, as misunderstood, becomes an impediment, an obstacle to growth, serves to build barriers between people and nations. The strength that is perceived in this tradition is an illusion. The clear alternative is a commitment to life in motion with purpose that is older than, more traditional if you would see things in this light, than any religion or ‘faith’ with that as its nature. Have faith in that which is what you are, what you are becoming, and what you will realize: Faith in a life without end, faith in rich experiences without end, faith in understanding without end, faith in love and wisdom without end.
