

First Contact

Let us agree that there is more to life than the physical plane, that there is life beyond the Earth, and that communication with these other realms is possible. As humanity on Earth awakens to its full potential, there will be even greater opportunity for direct contact with these other realms on an even wider scale. But this will not happen without preparation. This grouping of journeys may serve as an inspiration to the reader to open to his/her own role in this “first contact.”

The initial journey comes from a series of journeys called The New Paradigm, which is focused upon awakening humanity to a new way of looking at life in all its aspects, thus opening to its fullest potential. As this includes opening to life beyond the Earth, contact with this other life was addressed. It seemed appropriate to pick that piece up out of the larger New Paradigm context and add it to this series. (Some of the New Paradigm series has been published, and more will be coming. Be sure to check it out!) The other journeys were focused more directly on the parameters of generally making first contact with extraterrestrial life.

Additionally, I have sought to make contact with other worlds through my journeys. These are not included here, but rather as a series entitled Networking with Other Worlds. Please be sure to read that series as well, when it becomes available.

Preparing for contact and interaction with other worlds

NOETH ATULE: Yes, welcome, our young brother, to this condition of consciousness from which we speak. There are a number among us who have become aware of and knowledgeable in these matters of the next lifewave of potential for humanity, which has yet to realize the scope of the intimacy of the connection with each moment that life has with all of its elements, including humanity. Not only is each one not alone in life, but even influences the destiny of its own journey with the fulfillment of the destiny of others. What we speak of today mounts on top of the tradition of excellence that has existed in humanity and those who serve it.

But even now, there comes upon you a new threshold of excellence that will tax everything you have gained as a beginning to new possibilities. Humanity will grow so rapidly in consciousness and in conduct once it matures to the point of a more universal appreciation of the merits of other lifeforms, other worlds, other cultures. But the work of preparation begins with the peoples of your nations demonstrating these qualities with each other. The New Paradigm is predicated upon this achievement. Begin, then, with your family, your neighbors, your community, your local governments and community services. For what is to be achieved cannot be demonstrated in one area of life and subverted in another.

The New Paradigm will include principles of engagement with these new understandings of what seem to be distant worlds. Much to be obtained long before physical contact for, as we have demonstrated, your contact with other worlds' technologies, cultures, and individuals has already begun. The New Paradigm understanding is not to be mastered only in quiet reflection, contemplation, and absorption of understanding, but through demonstration, challenge, and achievement. One will perceive life and their own being in a completely new way. This will bring an openness that will allow or facilitate that perception in others. Now, not all cultures and species are adept at this, and there will be contact with such. More than the need, you see, for a certain maturity in these dealings.

JANU: Let us begin, then, this morning by announcing that the accumulation of effort in the direction of human liberation from limiting patterns of tradition is well underway. We acknowledge the many who contribute to this accomplishment and we focus this morning on the continuing effort.

There are a growing number of worlds in your vicinity becoming aware of humanity's emerging into the reality of other lives, other worlds, other civilizations. With cooperation and understanding, this transition, although difficult in some ways, can be managed effectively through communication. Shared understandings allow for the development of the first vestiges of trust.

Let us begin, then, by announcing that there are three—and soon to be seven—worlds aware of your existence with similar concerns as to what to expect and how to manage first contact. One phase of this is communications such as these, and they are happening around your world, dear one. Look for an increase in the so-called science fiction movies to be more intelligently written and inspired, in a way that allows the viewer to be filled with wonder and awe as well as confidence in engagement. Those who live in fear will slowly be assuaged by those who do not.

Fear is of the unknown, our brother, so let's contribute to making this known. Speak of other worlds, other species. Begin the pattern of understanding other societies and their concerns, their needs, their philosophies, and their cultures. Speak of this often. Bring it to the attention of your group. Speculate in a positive direction and attune to enlightenment.

We will be with you during these, with encouragement and insight. Thank you, our brother, and namaste.

JANU: I am Janu speaking, waiting then to proceed with the understanding that there exists no more than a few years before public human encounter with life from another world. Let this be understood as an opportunity, for human consciousness will expand at that moment, and the expansion will continue.

Humanity at this time needs a focus of attention beyond its own pettiness. This presence from another world understands that it is unwise to make first contact with any show of power or force or overwhelming technology, for this will induce fear in the consciousness of humanity, which is already filled with fear from its own internal misgivings. The contact will come in the form of a small physical presence and a brief one. A gift to humanity will be left.

And every effort will be made to present as an average looking human being, with conversational English in this country, and in the same manner elsewhere in the world. The key here is acceptance as one of you. Not to frighten with differences for, in humanity, fear is triggered quite easily. Conversation about their world and history will be given as though they were one of you who had just visited their world. And they will listen to your questions carefully, and answer them simply. You will experience, from your point of view, a friend from another world not unlike your own.

This will be the theme of the first encounters, our brother. And they will happen soon, very slowly at first. And in due course, exchanges will take place and both parties shall benefit and learn more of each other through these exchanges. All done slowly, for adjustments to take place and trust to develop.

This will come soon, our brother. Not too far off. Namaste.

Receiving contact from another world

JANU: I am Janu speaking, ranging then this morning our interests to include that which comes on the heels of enquiries from other worlds as we reach out to enquire as to other cultures and beings. There are those that enquire in a similar way and we are not isolated from their enquiries. So, this morning's journey will include responding to, attuning to those enquiries. Even as we speak, our brother, we encounter one such. Let us attune.

This enquiry, although not directed to the Earth, can be attuned to and connected with. We do so at this time.

This enquiry comes from a desert world, or should we say, a desert of a world. These beings have learned to make brick or construction materials from sand and dried earth, or soil, we should say. Vast underground systems of habitat, tapping water reservoirs deep within the world. With a scientific culture and a natural gift for insight and consciousness. There is one who calls but others are involved when contact is made.

(At this point the attunement was interrupted by an outside event, and the communication was terminated early.)

Preparation for first contact

Aug. 2, 2013

JANU: For this morning's journey, let us prepare for dialogue with visitors from another world. Now, granted, many have been here, and are here, and have learned the languages of the nations. And many have not. But the visitors realize that Earth is a world of words, communication primarily through language. Knowing this, they have prepared for first encounters, learning from the wisdom gained by those who are and have been here. Some will be telepathic, for that is their modality. Most of humanity would be startled by this experience, attempting to communicate verbally.

There will be those who can speak verbally and be negotiators and introducers to others from other worlds. Coming forward and interceding will be risky for them, for they will be instantly recognized by some as aliens. But much confusion will take place as to allegiances and loyalties and agendas. The visitors will, of course, demonstrate extreme patience for adjustments to take place. We speak of these visitors as if they are on the doorstep. They are not, but are experimenting with this at this time. Many have considered these possibilities, but do not own them as a reality in their world.

You ask, "Why are these visitations necessary? What is the reason for them?" The reason, our brother, is that humanity is reaching for the stars, as a figure of speech. They must be made aware of the protocols involved in engaging other worlds and cultures, hoping for a harmonious merging of mutual benefit. This is not the first time this has occurred. Many other worlds have gone through this first contact, so to speak. Some attempts have continued to success; others have been abandoned for a later time. But the issue is being forced by humanity's reach beyond its world.

The amount of debris in orbit around the planet does not bode well for humanity's propensity to leave its discards everywhere it goes. It represents contamination with its expansion. Eventually humanity will encounter more primitive worlds and need to understand the best methods for engagement, if at all, with respect for their sovereignty and culture and evolution. Contamination is a key understanding here, in its many forms. Not just in material things, but in technology, cultural, philosophical, and scientific. Humanity must be willing to learn the languages of others and understand the nuances of their existence and culture. Humanity's own integrity will be examined and tested, its honesty in words and deeds, even unto itself.

Much to be learned here, our brother, and prepared for, for good communication and exchange. It is coming closer and preparation is needed. Namaste, our brother.
