

The Origins and Evolution Of the Solar System

This series was begun in 1997. It was not possible to discuss the evolving solar system without addressing the development of the Earth and humanity, so the reader will note that journeys switch from the solar system to the Earth and back. In addition, there is some discussion of changes to occur very far in the future. Do not become discouraged or doubting because these events seem so vast or far away. Most of life has a much larger view of time than the limited incarnate human. See this as an opportunity to stretch your comprehension.

The origins and evolution of Earth, and relationship with Gaia

June 11, 1997

JANU: I am your brother, Janu, speaking with you this morning on this subject of some interest as you have stated: The Earth and its origins, its pattern of unfoldment, its significant moments of evolution, its life forms whether indigent or not, its relationship to your solar system and vice versa, and its connection with the beloved Mother Gaia. Yes, we will begin a series of unfoldings on this subject.

Let us begin in this manner of description if we may. Your Earth as you know it did not exist for a number of millennia. There was the forming up time, so to speak, not only for your Earth but for this solar system. The capacity of your sun to support, nurture and embrace these worlds was in its original design, you see. The finite number of your worlds circling this orb indicate as well, in reverse, its capacity to support these worlds. The timing of the appearance on the scene, so to speak, of each of the worlds was staggered to allow for the developing field strengths, energy radiation patterns and strengths, and range of spectrum of emanations from the sun, to match and nurture and support the coalescing and, yes, the capturing of these bodies. Indeed, your human understanding of species and their evolution, are a transplant from experimentation in other locales, one being Sirius. There is the perception that significant life form and consciousness evolved much later than the finishing of the physical world, so to speak. This is not true, dear one. There were experimentations and unfoldments on other worlds in your system prior to and simultaneous with that of the Earth. Your focus on Earth as the logical choice is based on your perception that your current life form is the best suited for Earth as it is at this time. However, life forms were not of such design in those earlier times and other worlds in your system were better suited, you see, Mars and Venus being such focuses of activity. Jupiter an experiment that, as you would put it, fizzled, for it would not progress under those circumstances to achieving the goals envisioned. Jupiter will come into its fuller expression at a later time.

Many such experiments have taken place in conjunction with the various natures of the planets in your system. Humanity is not the only experiment. However, humanity had the advantage of earlier development on other worlds. A variety of species development in your system on other worlds in your system were experiments conducted by life forms in other worlds, not human in nature. So, you see, your solar system has been a busy place, full of such projects for development. Each world offering different parameters. So, you see, your system is a family of worlds, of populations of sorts and will be once more, after the current migration of parameters now being experienced by your system, you see. These changes are anticipated and looked forward to, by those from other areas of your galaxy, for experimentation.

The Earth Mother Gaia is not alone in your system in her responsibility and connection with the ongoingness of a world. There are others as well. Even that one for Pluto, in its distant range and seeming limited patterns or parameters of support for life experimentation, has their connection and their responsibilities. Other smaller bodies in your system have attending consciousnesses but not so ordered and so structured as that of the major planets, you see. The beloved Gaia has moved from place to place, from realm to realm, and savored many opportunities for worldly experience and connection. This consciousness, this being, has embraced the larger life many times over, and was chosen, and chose, Earth opportunity with these credentials in mind. Gaia's command of the intricate web of interconnectedness across the regions of space and other realities has suited her to the scope of possibilities for outcome for the Earth and its life forms and their progression. Gaia exists as a being, free to embrace any reality she chooses, but has chosen a dominant influence for your world.

You ask of the roles of Gaia and the Planetary Logos, Sanat Kumara, any overlapping responsibilities and relationship. Gaia's mandate, or mantle if you will, is one of Earth Mother, protector of the orders of life, the balance of nature, the intertwining destinies and potentials of the Earth and its life forms. Our dear brother, Sanat Kumara, is lord of the soul destinies of humanity and the hierarchical perspective of the advancement of consciousness through service. There is overlap in the sense of synergism and mutual support for common interests. Gaia's role might be seen more as one of nature and our brother's one of, more of, consciousness evolution and its connection with the levels of life. Both serve the Earth in perfect harmony and balance and mutual understanding, with attentiveness in intimate connection with life. This is needed for any world of this complexity to evolve and merge with higher orders of life that exhibit throughout a region, moving into vaster networks of cooperation and intimate relationship.

We would begin this morning with this basic foundation of understanding. Much more will come in subsequent presentations or discourses, if you will. Yes, let us continue this worthy pursuit of foundation laying for understanding and connection with the larger vision for your world and your system.

Embracing the consciousness of our Solar System

Mar. 18, 1998 A

JANU: Now understand this, dear one, that the beginning of a solar system begins by virtue of a solar presence. The birthing of this body of life is a condensing of light substance initiated by the builders or designers and then these patterns handed down to the builders of form. The transfer of the clarity and the detailed potential for outcome from one body of life to another, the movement of this commission, if you will, is a trust that is recognized by the giver and the receiver. This trust or commission is embodied by, or we would say absorbed into, the consciousness of the one receiving. These elements of the hierarchy of creation are highly skilled and understand the focuses very well and the commitment that maintains this focus in a manner that a solar system can complete its journey.

There is an overall plan for the outcome of the journey of your solar system. Its product will serve another journey. Creation is established well enough, in its diversity, for these plans for life to have built within them justification for their existence by virtue of the role they play in the larger plan of life. Your solar system is described in this way. One of the outcomes, or plans, for your system's journey is the its collective being of light, of consciousness, emerge from its journey and take its place in the role of arbiter and overseer, if you will, of parallel universe systemic realities. This may seem vague to you at this time but it is not vague to the designers. There is much yet for your system to achieve in its original goal.

The Earth humanity at your current time is in its beginning stage in its embrace of life on this scale. It is our hope and desire to contribute to, through this one who speaks for us, to turning up the light, if you will, on this destiny. The consciousness of your world must embrace and evolve more fully in the direction of unified understanding and service to itself, to its system, to its original intent, that of the system we refer to. As one appreciates the infinitely varied and involved journeys of the elements of life of your system, one can still be reminded of the larger purpose which can only be fulfilled through the unifying of, the collaboration of, all of these elements. For this is the nature of life, dear one. It is a collaboration of all of its elements in harmony with and commitment to original intent.

You will in time begin to appreciate your solar system consciousness life and tune in to and understand its imperative, its vision, and its commitment. You will be able to perceive as a solar system, the consciousnesses that held the first coalescences into being. Transfer this core understanding to the elements of life within the creation and this can be known throughout the system. This is the ongoingness and the continuation of life that is reflected in even the momentary opportunities of each of your days to serve life. We would encourage a growing perception of a system approach to embracing not only your Earth as a system but your entire solar body. This will prepare you well for appreciating and connecting with life on a larger scale, for you will perceive as a solar system collective consciousness.

As we explore, in discourses to come, other elements of the progression of your system, keep this overview in mind and you will see the patterns of continuation that unite these journeys of exploration. Consider this carefully as we continue our journey, our brother. And until that time, we are the Brotherhood of Light bidding you namaste.

The integrity of the Solar System and the outer planets

Sept. 24, 1998 B

JANU: What interests us this day, for our journeys, is the integrity of the outer planets. The reason for the interest in this subject is the stability of those balancing forces that maintain the integrity of your solar reality or being. This system of sun and planets, of which you experience only a part, is a self-regulating dynamic field of life bodies and energy fields and electric currents and patterns of exchange as well as its interface with the larger universe and its hierarchies. These interfaces are how those who design and guide such a living system would realize the intent for its contribution to life. We would have you know this and acknowledge and be aware of the reality of this living entity.

You see your solar system as a system of planets and smaller bodies. We see it in a much larger complex way. We see it as, among other things, a consciousness with memory, intent, history, needs, services, unrealized potential, and an expression of the source of life. Your world plays a role in its integrity, being that of the dynamic field of creativity for third dimensional pattern generation of consciousness. Other worlds in your system contribute to consciousness in other realities. The focus for these realities does shift from one world to another as circumstances change. Earth is about to move into a new level. During transitions such as this, the entire system is alerted and contributes to and participates in the transition. The sun is the life regulator, through its power to sustain these many fields, and is the cohesive force for proximity and balance.

It is time for humanity to grow in its conscious responsibility by engaging this larger systemic reality and being a proactive representative and leader in this moment of transition and change. For many, a global consciousness, limited to your world, is a major feat. What we are suggesting here is a solar systemic consciousness, with awareness and sensitivity to the issues of the solar system and its many life dynamics, hierarchies, needs for services, and strengths. The integrity of any system is a function of the integration in function of its components, mutual support, a consciousness that embraces individual and collective functions. We see humanity moving in this direction out of necessity, for the well being of your system and to facilitate humanity's next stages of experience. The management of individual integrity on a human level speaks well of those who are in position to accept larger responsibility.

Many do not yet realize the delicacy of the nature of the balance of those forces that hold your solar system in its integrity. Much the same for your world. So examine closely your contribution to its integrity. Learn from this as you move into a larger venue. We offer this by way of introduction into larger possibilities that already exist.

Fine tuning the configuration of the Solar System

May 24, 2000 A

JANU: I am Janu speaking, having made contact this morning on the subject of the origin and evolution of your solar system. We see from this perspective a living body with consciousness and purpose, which is the nature, in fact, of all life in motion; each one having, however, predisposition to certain manifestation, a course of life, if you will. As to your solar body consciousness, we would see it in this way. The producing of a solar system such as yours comes about through the involvement, and at times intercession, of the Lords and organizations of many offices in the Hierarchy of Life. For your particular solar system, some uniqueness can be described as to its preparation for its journey and its purpose.

In the area of preparation, we would have you know at this time, there will be those bringing about some changes as it prepares to be the archetype for the design stages of another solar body, you see. For this takes place from time to time in the evolution of solar bodies. "Solar" being a term aligned with the name of your solar center. This preparation of which we speak at this time embodies a collection of sorts of what we would call fine tuners as to your solar configuration, your collective human consciousness being one such object of fine tuning, but by no means the only one.

What qualities, then, are needed for this archetypal model? They are an integrity of the dynamic structures that can continue to be a reference of a coalescing and an evolution for a substantial period as reference, you see. Another quality being good communication pathways on a number of energetic levels or realities, being the equivalent of your circulatory system for the nourishment of worlds. Another quality being a pipeline, if you will, to the source of your solar existence drawing upon a changing and evolving diversity of consciousnesses serving many levels of its existence, demonstrating a complex, vital platform of life in motion.

We would have you know this, that the movement of your solar body and all elements of life contained within its authority is by no means the only significant change taking place. Your system of worlds is going through other changes as well, having to do with their light frequency, their role with the networking of your solar body with larger venues of life and the preparation for a new, fairly large and dynamic addition to your system of worlds. This will come about on a timetable many of your generations into your future. The arrival of this body will trigger or jump-start your solar system into its final stage of evolution as a physical system, you see. But there is much preparation yet to be achieved for such an event. You will come to understand that solar bodies, or groupings, experience many such changes of this and other natures that contribute to the changing dynamics of their purpose, destiny, if you will.

The loss of your world in your system comprising the asteroid belt created an imbalance in your solar body's path of destiny. This will be balanced with this coming event. It is possible to explore the ramifications of this change to your current solar reality. We will do so at another time.

A new planet and its influence

Dec. 14, 2001 A

JANU: We have before us this afternoon the subject you have requested, having to do with the origins and development of your solar system. We say "your" in a certain sense from your perspective for, in the larger view, many make this claim for this solar system, for there is much life here, you see. More than your science realizes. Much of the life comes and goes of its own accord, reaching into this system and then departing. Some life is indigenous but most is not. Your own origins speak to this as a complex array of influences.

The focus of our last journey in dealing with the loss of one of your solar bodies, comprising the Asteroid Belt, soon, in the larger time of cosmic perspective, to be replaced with another, as was said, significant body. In addition to this understanding, we would speak to the influence this will have, and has had, on the rest of your system. The Nodes of Rotation of your world and certain others, were influenced by the loss of this solar body. The Asteroid Belt comprises 83% of the original mass, however, being dispersed as it is, no longer carries the same influence in the distribution of orbital influences and the relationship between the planets, you see. Imbalances were struck and worlds responded. Many moons were lost and some retained. There was a ripple effect of communication of these changes throughout your system and were registered in the ethers, if you will, in the larger networks of energetic dimensions or realities constituting your sector of the universe. Responding to this, to bring balance once more, to the destiny of your collection of worlds, another body was formed and will reappear in your system as we described. Its influence will be to overcome gravitational inertias, replacing your ninth planet's numerical order and it will move to the position of tenth, with its orbital period increasing by a factor of fifteen Earth days. The evolution of Jupiter and Neptune will return to a pace commensurate with their destinies. The Earth will notice little effect, but the moons of Jupiter will be disturbed in their orbits and will crash into the surface, all but one.

This large body entering your system itself will be comprised of grayish matter, being an organically dead body but rich in magnetic and other energetic fields which will have their influence throughout your system. It will be a counterpoint for the radiations of your sun and amplify the sun's communications to the outer planets, enhancing their energy fields, you see. Your solar system has a gap or hole in its fields of communication, interplanetary communication, for quite some time. This will be filled by this new body, you see. Eventually what will be called "starlets" will be formed, due to the intensification of energetic fields and they will comprise a new dynamic in your solar system. These starlets will have freedom of movement in your system, not governed by orbital forces of your planets. These starlets reposition themselves by means of other energy fields but will be visible to human sight.

Many changes coming, dear one, to your system of worlds. The human journey is not immune to these changes. And these starlets represent the next major shift in the potential of human consciousness as it embraces the rest of the universe, for they are vehicles of trapped human potential finding its freedom.

Elements of evolution

Jan. 23, 2003 B

JANU: Today's encounter will bring forward, or elicit, an understanding as to the nature of the order of assignments of responsibility of service of the destiny or outcome of the many factions that govern or facilitate the complexity, the totality of your system of worlds. Your system is by no means an isolated island of life in this universe. It is connected in so many ways not of your understanding with other venues of life and the essential nature of existence in this universe.

There will be an alignment that will manifest a previously mentioned addition to your solar system in the millennia to come, that is being orchestrated in part by the current solar activity. Many changes are due in the configurations of your planets and other bodies. Preparation for acceptance of this new addition and its influence energetic throughout your system. The Hierarchy of your system is involved in this preparation and coming event and the realization of its purpose.

The Orders of Life that guide your solar system and serve it hold the vision for this change but are not fully privy to all that will transpire as the eons go by. The net outcome is known in a perspective that would seem nebulous to you and unformed, but it is the nature of vision on that scale of life and rings true enough to guide these great ones in new adventures. For their responsibilities and contribution to your solar system lie within a vision and understanding far beyond its physical existence, for it is known what life has in store far beyond the current reality.

This brotherhood that is the guiding consciousness for your solar system speaks with one voice, when it is purposeful to do so. Your awareness of this existence does serve the awakening of humanity and will precipitate announcements from time to time that will accelerate your understanding and opportunities to contribute. The structures of life are so well established and diverse in their complexity and profound, profound in their union, their harmony, that you will grow immeasurably as you begin to appreciate their truth. To move in these ways of reality, one must loose their grip on concepts of time and position in space, although not completely, for these venues of consciousness grace many realities simultaneously, as does your solar system. So you must be attuned, awakened, larger than your human existence.

The origin and evolution of the Solar System (a reprise)

Sept. 6, 2012 A

JANU: We have with us this morning a revelation of many things pertaining to the origin and evolution of your solar system. Let there be a beginning, then, by announcing that there will come a time when your solar system will cease to be as such but this is a process, my brother, that will take many twists and turns, leaving humanity free to explore the stars.

For the time being, then, your solar system will go through many changes, some perceptible and some not so. These changes will bring about an altering of conditions for humanity's survival, development of consciousness, and the ease of communicating with the life of your solar system. The authority for this system is, of course, the Solar Body, the source of light and life for so much of your system, including yourselves. Now, the spiritual side of humanity benefits as well, for it bathes in the warmth and glow of a loving sun. You would do well to perceive and appreciate the beneficial influence of the Solar Body upon all life in your system. This body contains the elements of life and when its course is through, will create new life, and the saga goes on and on.

Now then, understand this, our brother, that your creative consciousness--and that of all humanity--creates life, not through the so-called death throes of transition but, every moment of every day, the elements of new life are created. Not just human life, but other life as well, including the creatures of your Earth. Now, as human consciousness expands to the other worlds in your system, life creation will continue in ways you cannot imagine at this time. Now, humanity is not the only species that creates life. There are countless others.

Now, what do we mean, then, by creating life? What does this appear as? It appears as the expansion, the modification, yes, even the mutation of life that already exists, for the creation of life is a process and has always been so. Witness the nature of your universe, as much as you know of it. The process continues, not just by some distant hand, but by the life that the universe is in all of its forms. Your solar system evolves much in this way as well, and we would have you know that humanity is a part of that evolution, and not just on the Earth, you see, but even in the Sun itself.

So, as you are given life, our brother, return it. It is the nature of things. It is the nature of your solar system, of which you are a part, and not just physically, you see. Embrace your world, your sun, and your solar system as a co-creator in its evolution, in its contribution to life. Become one with it and come to be a larger life.

The evolution of Gaia

Oct. 16, 2012 A

JANU: We welcome you this morning to an understanding of that which is being prepared at this time for announcement to those of your world who will listen. An agreement of sorts has been made with the Brotherhoods that serve your world, to align themselves with the evolution of your planet, Gaia if you will, to become a leader of sorts, an example of achievement in collective reasoning and enlightenment as a world.

Now, to accomplish this, our brother, there needs to be a growth in awakening for humanity as an inspiration for other creatures of your world who are ready for this. It is your task, and the task of others, to move in this direction, which you are doing, our brother. We will accomplish this together. The Brotherhoods have agreed to be supportive in this, for this is an opportune moment for Gaia to evolve.

Gaia is aware of this and agrees and is ready. Much will come from this. Gaia's role in the solar system hierarchy will expand. The call has been made. Let us proceed. Much of our service journeys will be devoted to this effort. Thank you, our brother, and namaste.

The Solar System's signature radiation

Nov. 28, 2012

JANU: This morning's journey into the Light embraces the origin and evolution of the solar system, as you have requested. Let there begin then an examination of this symphony of life. What we observe this morning is the collective reality of your solar system and its presence.

When embracing the collective reality of this system, one is impressed with its collective vibrational nature as a presence in what you call this region of space. It radiates a pulsing of energy that one can sense when approaching it. Those that travel in your direction can monitor this pulse, which is as a fingerprint identifying your system, making it relatively easy to locate. Proximity is determined by the character of the pulse, which includes the in-breath and out-breath of the vital life force, even as your own.

Understand that your system's radiation is not alone, and many others populate. Your system radiates not only the pulse but the complex frequencies, if you will, of radiation from each element, worlds if you will. And the human dynamic in this radiation is detectable, revealing sentient species that exist within an entire system, you see, whether one or many. They are identifiable.

This is not electro-magnetic radiation, to be detected in conventional manner of your familiarity. Therefore, your natural laws of proximity do not apply. But this signature is unique, detectable, definable. All of life has this, our brother, which contributes to the nature of our journeys.

Humanity has yet to realize that the existence in nature of other worlds and species is not hidden due to limited technology of travel, but to limited application of natural faculties. The nature of your collective presence, radiation, if you will, can be known from within the system, when recognized. Be not limited by traditional perceptions of distance, time, and delay, and speed. They limit because they are allowed to.

What maintains, to some degree, the integrity of other collective systems in the presence of each other on these so-called wavelengths of radiation is that each has its own signature and their uniqueness ensures their integrity. Sameness is not prevalent in the universe, for what would be gained? And much would be lost. So, in your quest for worlds with life like your own, be open to a more diverse reality.

So the evolution of your solar system continues, ever changing within its integrity and potential. The same is true for each one in your world. One can know and detect the signature of another, and know of their presence and their condition in life. There are not secrets, our brother, only limited understanding and awareness. Namaste.

Humanity's home moves beyond this solar system

Jan. 11, 2013

JANU: The journey of your Earth and its Solar System quite remarkable indeed as we see from this vantage for, as your scientists are beginning to realize, the creation of a world, sun, solar system is a remarkable occurrence considering the many variables and the appearance of happenstance in the accretion. Stabilization and relationships within the system, you see. Your Earth and this solar system have endured many such occurrences and would have you realize that there have always been guiding consciousnesses with creative input and capability, especially when the ingredients support such development.

Your Earth's viability for what it is today was not always so. The destiny of Mars was such and, for a time, was a flower of life. But no world is in stasis with such life. Other worlds in your system have potential of their own but the circumstance of their existence does not duplicate that of the Earth. Mars will regain a portion of its former glory, so to speak, as it is explored and colonized, but this will be in opposition to its current condition.

Your Earth will come apart in the distant future, but humanity will have moved on and ultimately blend into the cultures of some other worlds and Earth will become a memory. Many assume that its disintegration will be from collisions. Not so, our brother. It will be from within the world itself and the resulting debris will begin the long process of accretion. But by that time, humans will have explored most of the solar system. Scientists will have learned of the mechanism for Earth's disintegration from within, and this will add importance to migration. Venus and Mars will be influenced by this activity, eliminating them as long-term outposts for humanity. These changes are not unique, but life continues, our brother, and finds a way. Namaste.

Origin and evolution are one

Feb. 20, 2013

JANU: The origin of your solar system, as you may imagine, is described to some degree by your scientific discoveries. What they have yet to discover is that the universe is filled with life and not all of that life is physical, you see. The same is true for the vicinity of your solar system and many such who journey through life in this way have a role to play in the formation of the ever changing and evolving physical universe.

Now, it appears as though, from your observations, that the solar system is a relatively fixed entity. This is an illusion, our brother, for the changes that created it continue. Now, that which originates a creation is imprinted upon the creation and the evolution and unfoldment of the creation has its imprint in the reality of the creators, you see. Now, entropy certainly has its reality and the movement of life is such that no creation is static but disassociates and changes. This will be true of humanity as well, for the physical humanity is a creation and will change.

Now, the question arises: Does a creation complete its potential before dissolution and transformation? This potential we speak of does not exist isolated from others, you see. There is an interactive role-playing here, and this helps to describe the evolution of your system, your solar system. Time-wise, the scale of this can be compressed or expanded, but the changes will come, for this process exists everywhere and it must be so for life to evolve and expand into its full potential.

So the subject of origin and evolution are the same story, you see. Your preconceptions, or your conceptions of suns and planets and moons and stars and other objects, and their path in life must in time give way to a different scenario. And already there are anomalies from this, deviations in the universe that your science would be hard pressed to understand. Especially, how they got that way, you see. So living in the moment, in the Now with your consciousness, leaves you open to this course of life and lets you be less rigid in your thinking and understanding.

Everything is changing, our brother, ultimately into something else, to better address potential and creation. Namaste.

Entropy and manifestation

April 1, 2013

JANU: I am Janu speaking, reaching then into this vast well of information to understand not only the nature of your solar system but, through it, the movement of life.

Your solar system exists on a knife-edge, so to speak, of balance between entropy and manifestation. Let there begin then an understanding that all of manifestation of life exists in this way. It is necessary that this be so for stasis in life is death, so to speak, for the rejuvenation of any manifestation is permitted by and facilitated by this balance. Even though the universe appears stable and eternal, it is not. And its balance, as well as yours, is maintained by life's willingness to allow existence to be temporary, as it changes constantly into new manifestation.

You ask then what then will your solar system become if it exists on this knife-edge of balance and change? It will become, our brother, merged with another, for another has already disassociated its equilibrium and those celestial bodies are on the move. One of those bodies at a time will engage this solar system and the dynamics will change dramatically into a new relationship of life. As your scientists reach for other worlds, several will come your way. Humanity will discover these long after journeys beyond your solar system will have taken place. Orbital paths in your solar system will change and there will be some destruction, but no longer will only one world support life in your system. And, yes, you will populate at least one of these. And, no, the others will not be populated, for their journey has rendered this impossible. One will be quite large.

This will do for now, our brother. Namaste.

The asteroid belts

May 10, 2013

JANU: Let us journey then into the heart of, the midst of the so-called Asteroid Belt, of which there are more than one, on one scale or another. The one between Mars and Jupiter, although having many asteroids, has less mass than the ones beyond your solar system. It will be discovered that it is comprised of pieces of planetary debris, or rock, if you will, that are the result of a collision of sorts of various bodies early in your system's development and a few of which, our brother, came from debris from the Earth. But because of its position between Jupiter and Mars, and the gravitational influences of the sun and all the bodies that orbit it, it became a zone of natural repository of debris. And, yes, there are those that have escaped this region and move closer to the sun and the inner planets, but comparatively speaking very few, as a result of collisions within this region. This could change when the new planets enter your system in the far distant future. Witness the behavior of the rings of Saturn that are so critical to Saturn's gravity.

Now, collectively these asteroid belts, rings, have a gravitational field of their own, which is stable by proximity to the worlds they orbit, or the sun, if you will. So the condition of their orbits and their physical characteristics are the result of a dance of equilibrium among many forces. And their cohesive force, being gravitational but without physical connection with each element, are subject to variations due to the many influences, more so than a planet would be, you see, for it is more coordinated or fixed in its configuration.

Now, then, outside your solar system is where the interesting phenomena take place. For their dance is based upon the collective of the entire solar system and all of its forces, energies, relationships, and configurations. They comprise more mass than your inner asteroid belt and contain larger bodies than exist in your inner asteroid belt. Your so-called planetoid Pluto was one of them, but through accretion sustained or gained enough mass to establish an orbit more stable than the elements it is made of. A view of your system in its formative time would appear to be virtual chaos of uncoordinated movement and forces. But as small coordinations appeared, individual forces, gravitational fields, became prominent. Natural regulations and relationships began to occur.

There are three platforms of life, physically, in your system at this time. The Earth is one. Two moons are the others. But the nature of the platforms renders the life...the lives quite different.

That will do for today, our brother. Namaste.

Earth's beginnings

July 1, 2013

JANU: I am Janu speaking, examining as we may the origins of this solar system. We take a look at, so to speak, the nebulous environs, a very checkered past of beginnings and endings and pauses and disruptions and apparent—or seeming—confusion of forces and materials. More than many realize. There are those beings who played a huge role, and still do, in the evolution of your world from its beginnings.

Your scientists consider the beginnings of planets and other bodies to be a sometimes fortuitous haphazard accumulation of events, and the outcomes purely the product of happenstance. In a perception that the universe is mostly devoid of physicality, an empty void, a vacuum, the creation of a world is not all that predictable, you see. It is for this reason that so many serve life by supporting the organization of the elements of life, of creation, to form these platforms of life. As you know, not all of these platforms support life as you know it, but they have their function, their purpose, for they are part of creation and its path of re-creation.

Your Earth came very close to destruction. It has inwardly as well, for your platform of life, your world, is very dynamic and is not a fixed entity. Even the oceans of your world, and many plant species, and, yes, even humanity, were not indigenous in their beginning. So your world is a collection of those elements borrowed, accumulated from many sources of life, many other creations. But the accumulations and their nature provided a destiny or path of evolution that could progress into something more.

Do not discount the significance of other worlds completely unlike your own. This is a narrow view of the diversity of life and its synergism. Humanity's awakening is a destiny yet fulfilled. The revelation of these origins and the composition of the Earth will become known when humanity embraces more of life, more of the universe. For this is the source of these accumulations and other worlds have similar paths coming into being. Exploring other worlds reveals more of your own and the life that it is.

There are such titanic forces at work throughout the Earth that the presence or the passing of a large body too closely could render it unviable. Realize, our brother, that life is a complex, constantly shifting relationship of many forces and elements, and the Earth is but one in this churning sea of life. Understanding this is not to bring fear, but to challenge complacency to the point of taking little for granted and making the most of opportunity and potential. In this balanced way, embrace life, especially in the moment.

The formation of the Earth and the Solar System

July 4, 2013

JANU: Yes, greetings, my brother. I am Janu speaking, remembering when there was no counsel for the Earth. By 'counsel' I mean those who focused their attention on the destiny of the Earth as a platform of life.

For most of humanity, the beginning of the Earth is a given, without much understanding or history. We would say to you now that life's potential is not a given, as such, but subject to determination by consciousnesses with skill and commitment to explore potential inherent in life and form it into expression. This process is unfolding throughout the universe, even at this time, and will continue indefinitely, the Earth being a moment in that vast scenario. Humanity has a tendency to perceive life in terms of the length of sojourns, for they are unconscious to the realities of life beyond that.

So the Earth began, our brother, as a realization of potential by those with the perceptive abilities to witness such. When the Earth was nearly destroyed in its beginning, it was not left to chance for it to re-organize. The physical distance across the universe is insignificant when consciousness embraces life, for consciousness is free of these limitations, which makes vast coordinated efforts possible and effective. The formation of the planet, physically and energetically, and the solar system was managed carefully with a passion for life and not just that of the solar system, you see.

So the development of the Earth was part of a larger organization of development for the entire solar system. Those who served this process had long and profound understanding of such things, for your solar system was not the first. Do not think that the effort is complete, for your solar system still evolves and has much destiny before it, and its configuration is subject to change, as well.

Humanity is awakening to larger and more complex realities of life, no longer limited to 'this island Earth' as they perceive it, growing into a relationship with the larger life. These journeys represent the call to awakening and for humanity to have confidence in a future filled with wonder, discovery, and service.

The many realities involved in creating a solar system

Oct. 12, 2013

JANU: Science understands this origin as the accretion of material resulting from the explosion of a star and the ensuing relationships and masses and gravitational fields. And this is true; however, this is only part of the picture, for there are many manifestations of subtle realities, many kinds of energy. For all of the universe, our brother, is a wide range of life, not just physical, you see. Therefore, if a sun or a star explodes and the cycles of accretion begin, they begin in a life reality far more complex. Subtle realities to human consciousness, but dynamic and vivid and powerful realities that the unawakened mind cannot perceive. But they are part of the totality of life and are necessary for the worlds to exist, for the source for the worlds is energetic and non-physical realities, which are more primary and causal to these creations. And these influences continue for the entire duration of the universe. So, to understand the origin of the Solar System and its evolution thoroughly, one must open to all of the realities that participate.

One would think that the evolution of the Solar System physically, once created, is a path of its own. It is never separate from the source of its being and its many realities. Humanity experiences the same, yet mostly unaware. Now, what does the awareness of these realities bring to one's relationship with and appreciation of the evolution of the Solar System? In a very real way, our brother, when one is conscious as these realities, determinations can be made, service can be rendered, influences can out-picture, when one's consciousness, or a world's consciousness is more intimately involved. There are very practical aspects to this, you see, for all of life's creations and manifestations are subject to correction or manipulation to overcome anomalies and achieve more desirable results, as the many variables ensue. Once again, the need for, the opportunity for awakening for humanity. And make no mistake, our brother. Humanity's future is in this direction and will participate in many services to the evolution of life beyond the solar system.

We would have you think and attune in this direction, for the future of humanity includes this. Opportunities rich and vast, beyond the imaginations of most of humanity. And, as we've said before, life spews forth, creating layers of manifestation, opportunities and potential. And awakening is part of this and crucial. This is part of the origin and the evolution of the Solar System. Much to awaken to. Namaste, our brother.

Solar system shrinking slightly

Dec. 16, 2013

JANU: For this morning's journey, let us partake of a new opportunity to focus upon the re-organization of life as it pertains to solar bodies that make up the solar system. Now, re-organization does not always mean major shuffling and changing. It can mean widespread minor adjustments that have a significant influence upon a system.

The solar system is going to shrink a little, here and there, to enhance energetic communication between the sun and the rest of the solar system, and each other. This is in preparation for coming changes in the evolution of the system. As we said earlier, there'll be one new planet entering this system and this re-organization is in part a response to this change.
