

UFO Examinations

An automated communications craft	Page 2
An examination of a UFO	Page 2
Sub-craft and the pursuit of rogue craft	Page 4
UFO examinations	Page 5
A space planning conference	Page 5
Seven craft poised for long journey	Page 6
Local craft of old	Page 7
Transportation by manipulation into other realities	Page 7
An introduction to The Seven from Space	Page 8
A journey through an artificial wormhole	Page 9
Being examined by three UFOs	Page 9
A craft on Mars	Page 10
A lunar mission to support others	Page 11
Earth UFO history and a craft near Spain	Page 11
The arrival of spacecraft D-1	Page 12
Derelict craft passing near the solar system	Page 12
The beings who create and use UFOs	Page 12

An automated communications craft

Dec. 10, 1998 B

JANU: We have at our disposal at this moment a craft for examination as you have requested earlier this day. It will be available only for a short time, a few moments in your time. It is imperative for this journey that we proceed at this time, without delay.

The craft hovers approximately 80 of your miles above the Earth in the North Polar region, 10 degrees off planetary axis. It hovers there, waiting for a communication link from another craft. This is a rendezvous point, communication wise. At times, certain positional alignments are needed to facilitate this particular form of communication. This craft is quite slender from top to bottom, with a small round pedestal in the middle of the bottom side of this craft, the top being a flattened dome shape of very gradual slope. It is circular in configuration and awaits its next instructions. There is no crew on board as such. This is an automated craft, therefore not needing to be very large to accommodate crew. It is approximately thirteen meters across, seven across the pedestal underneath, and four meters in height at the center.

This craft will remain in this position for thirteen more of your moments, or minutes. At the moment, it is physical in its presence and controlled by a larger craft located quite near your sun. This larger craft has, at the moment, twenty-three such remotely controlled craft patrolling different areas. Just as you have observed natural lines of energy involved in your world, called grids or ley lines, there is a counterpart to this in what you call space as well; therefore, the need for positioning to take advantage of these. Some precision is needed for this in positioning. This remote craft will be a transfer link, receiving this communication along one grid line and transmitting it, or relaying it, in another direction through another grid line. This craft repeats this operation at this location every seven solar cycles. That being every seven of your Earth days.

Now then, let us proceed with the interior of this craft, as we notice that is of your interest. There are no crew quarters as such, mainly communication, propulsion, and navigational equipment. This craft is particularly well suited to monitoring, measuring, and configuring various energy fields, both natural and artificial, so to speak. Its surface has a variety of patterns of energy absorbing, detecting, manipulating, and transmitting surfaces or segments. Navigational segments circle the craft at the furthest edge. The manipulation segments radiate outward from the upper and lower apexes of the central hub. The communication surfaces are dead center, if you will, at these apexes. This craft does not rotate or spin physically but does so energetically.

It has just been alerted. The signal it has been waiting for is about to be received. The relay will take place in one microsecond of your time, including three segments of communication. This particular craft has been in continuous operation for ninety of your years, the last nine being in this current duty. It has received and relayed its transmission and will be departing now. It will return in seven days.

The nature of this communication is one of regular communication, partly for the purpose of maintaining a network. And we will leave it at that at this time. Namaste.

An examination of a UFO

April 16, 1998 B

JANU: For this afternoon's journey, we would embark upon a foray of sorts into the discovery and understanding of what have been called UFOs or space craft. We have employed for this afternoon's journey one such craft for examination, not only as to its structure and capabilities but as to the nature of its origins and function, meaning those who man it and who built it and who authorize its journeys. You inquire as to why we have chosen this subject. We have done so to add to the foundation of understanding more of what you call the "family of life."

Now then, let us proceed. This first craft of our examination is a forty foot diameter model with propulsion system based on a refined form of gravity or graviton field manipulation. The energy required for rapid accelerations or changes in direction is accomplished by a secondary accumulation of field concentration generating a charge contained within the vehicle's energy cells for rapid discharge. The realities of the field of propulsion in a natural configuration is not sufficient for these rapid movements, although they are sustained indefinitely for long distance travel. Yes, we understand, there are those propulsion systems that bypass normal space and time. That will come later. These craft, the type of which we speak, are carefully engineered to balance these forces precisely. The slightest deviation in balance and dimensional accuracy and stability will set in motion destructive patterns. It will literally tear the ships apart. In order to counteract the effects of small collisions disturbing trajectory and the balance of momentums, these craft employ a deflection system that absorbs and redistributes these impacts, or the energy of them, we should say.

If on your surface of your world, this craft of which we speak would weigh approximately forty metric tons. The inertia of this mass is overcome by the distribution scheme of forces throughout the craft, exerted during velocity changes or changes in direction. This is an older type craft, not with what exists in other technologies, but explains certain basic capabilities and approaches to problem solving in natural forces. The crew of this craft are approximately eight feet in height. There are three in number, although as many as five are at times employed. They have yet to employ what you have called symbiotic relation with propulsion and accomplish navigation by sophisticated control mechanisms, more in the direction of optical with some electronic. Servo reference, or gyroscopic reference, is accomplished by a fluid suspension of micro particles in a sealed chamber that maintain their molecular orientation with predetermined base positioning. Re-orientation is possible by the use of non-magnetic or electric fields. The crew's quarters in this small craft are integral to what you might call the control room. They are more in the direction of configured areas to accommodate body size and shape and function. Communication exists between craft and other worlds on a modified form of the energy used to reprogram or direct their navigational reference device. These sub lightyear or lightspeed transmissions are then relayed by other craft or stations with trans-lightspeed capability and communication. A rather large network, you see.

Now, as to the function or purpose of this particular craft, due to its more primitive technology, it serves as a navigational aid for others travelling at sub- and super-light speeds. It is a navigational reference for this area of worlds with updated information as to astronomical configurations and movements of various bodies, and serves as a research vessel. It is visited, from time to time, for servicing and crew changes, by other craft. So, you see, there is a network of craft less technologically capable serving more stationary reference platforms to coordinate other journeys. This one almost never lands on a surface, drawing its propulsion energy and conversion to life support needs directly from solar radiation and certain energy fields between worlds and in the background of what you call space.

This particular vessel has been made available for examination short of identification and location information. That is the agreement of today's encounter. There is much more to explore in this direction and we will avail ourselves of these opportunities as time goes on. We thank you for your attention on this journey and look forward to many more. Thank you, our brother. Acknowledgement and communication with these beings is not advised at this time, for good reason, although your wish to do so is acknowledged. Namaste, our brother.

Sub-craft and the pursuit of rogue craft

February 29, 2002 C

JANU: Let us begin, then, with a journey into the sub-order of these craft having to do with the natural tendency of some to begin exploration on their own without due consideration of the Orders of Life. These sub-craft operate independently and are transparent to those craft that would individually take off, so to speak, on their own adventures with disturbing influence to other species and life systems. This sub-order of craft bring about surveillance of those systems that contain within them unregistered craft exhibiting these signatures that do not agree with ordered exploration, you see. Sub-craft generally, then, are those that patrol given destinations and those corridors for travel not generally used.

These sub-craft manifest light propulsion in such a way as to leave no signature traceable by those craft being sought. They exist within a narrow time frame and can move in and out of various existences in a matter of moments. Their modus operandi, if you will, is to relieve these rogue craft of the ability to propulse themselves by neutralizing the fields of opportunity around them. These craft then project the rogue=identity along the corridors of communication, leaving the craft rendered permanently inoperable and transport the inhabitants to holding sites in various sectors. There is great profit to be made by some, to the great disadvantage of many worlds and cultures, and this will not be tolerated.

The sub-craft are skillfully made, designed, so as to bring no attention to themselves yet with the freedom to navigate freely. They are many times unmanned, if you will, without crew, and are highly automated in their operation. Their whereabouts or presence is known only to a few in the hierarchy of the governing authorities. They have prevailed in what you might call sub-space for many ages.

As to points of origin, or home bases, if you will, they are unregistered with any world and are maintained by a fleet of what you might call Aghost ships≅ operating within the narrow time realities mentioned. If you came into contact with one of these within its reality, its parameters of existence, you would find that you might pass right through it but this feature serves its ability to disable a rogue craft for it can choose to co-exist with the rogue craft and disable it from within, so to speak. An interesting maneuver in tactics and control. Understanding then the reason for crewless flight or travel: the crew then of the offending craft being transferred from within to the sub-craft for conveyance.

To further investigate these sub-craft one must endure or perform a change in their structure that would not be agreeable to the human existence. We, then, of course must discontinue our investigation beyond this point and return then to our previous arrangement. Good afternoon, our brother, and namaste.

UFO examinations

August 15, 2012 A

JANU: Yes, our dear brother, may we examine at this time the craft you have visited in the past. And not the too distant past, we might add.

These craft resemble your media's popular description, being circular, but not understood in their capabilities. The craft of our choosing this morning exhibited much ability beyond your technology. They had the ability to reach into multiple realities, dimensionally speaking, and could reach speeds--when in your reality--of upwards of Mach 10. However, in other dimensions, other realities, travel was almost instantaneous, for these realities are beyond Einstein's principles. Visitors to these craft from your world have experienced this but weren't aware of what was taking place. They were, of course, optically invisible when traveling in this way and could easily park themselves out of visual range when observing worlds.

The spinning nature of their energy fields, when opposing or aligned with the direction of subtle energies of worlds and other structures in your universe, gave them motion and directionality. Slight angular movements would give subtle changes to these conditions. The source of power for these rotating fields came from a unique way of absorbing energies they traveled through, and storing them. So this was a matter of propulsion by manipulation, not needing external refueling, as such. There is more energy available everywhere than you might think.

Your natural limitations in movement and the restriction of obstacles and surfaces have no effect on these, so their perceptions as operators are completely different than your own. Their navigation is accomplished, in large measure, by a network of communication with many other craft and some "dead reckoning," if you will. Their network is not unlike your GPS system of satellites and can pinpoint locations, not only of destination but of the craft. Many of these craft are piloted, and many are not. The journeys from star to star seem inconceivable in your current situation and timeframes. These craft accomplish this routinely, when needed.

You have experienced many worlds and cultures in your travels, in crafts such as these; therefore, your affinity to these concepts and realities. Your solar system is on that grid, so to speak, and many craft have come and gone. And some are still in your system. But realize, our brother, that your system is a minor one. Let us bring, then, this discussion to a close, open to many more when we continue these. Namaste, our brother.

A space planning conference

June 15, 2013

JANU: For this morning's journey, we will be examining a range of these craft you have called 'UFOs' for there is a conference of sorts, a gathering of these, to be known as, in your terms, a space planning conference.

These craft have congregated in the vicinity of a world with a history of such, for the purpose of sharing information, group planning, coordination of efforts, and improving each other's technology and capability. These craft are 700 in number, or so. It varies for some come and go when their purpose is completed. Many craft are uniform in configuration and many are not, depending upon their method of propulsion or movement and function.

This planet was chosen for it has adopted a culture of acceptance and accommodation for the various needs of many different species. This conference occurs once every approximately 100 years of your time, which also varies depending upon the level of need. Yes, there are those present who know of your Earth and its present technology and culture. It is shared with others, although not widely.

The accumulation of information is organized and distributed for those to benefit at different times and distance. Information collection and archiving is vast. The condensation of information makes your technology archaic and slow. Their information storage is energetic, neither digital nor analog, partially physical and partially what might be called plasmonic. Not subject to decay or deterioration of any kind, instantly retrievable in any grouping. They have profound systems of analysis, organization, and interpretation. Know that the archives are available upon request to the participants.

The subjects considered in this conference are: exploration of new frontiers; the integration of worlds being discovered into this larger system of life; jurisdictions; resolution of conflicts or other disturbances; the building of new systems; the development of more sophisticated craft; communication; coordinated journeys of exploration; the technological advancements of many worlds; societal achievements, resolutions, and breakthroughs in understanding; the nature of life and reality; and the birthing and death of worlds, and the rescue of cultures. This gathering has a profound range of interests and purposes. Their location is not significant at this time, only their existence and accomplishments. This sort of thing occurs to smaller degrees in various locations, leading to this massive gathering. So much work to be accomplished has already been begun, setting the stage for this undertaking.

Be aware, then our brother, that life beyond the Earth is full, rich, and very busy. Namaste.

Seven craft poised for long journey

Nov. 6, 2012

JANU: What we see today before us is an alignment, of sorts, of these craft as they partake of a mission to prolong or extend the journeys of these for a variety of worlds. Now then, they are parked inside a belt of radiation known to them by the name "Extensor Belt." What this means to them is: this belt of radiation can extend the range of these craft by the nature of the radiation, you see, for this, in large measure, is how they propel themselves.

These craft are seven in number and vary in configuration. Crew numbers are three per unit. And their configuration for travel will at times include physical ranging to dimensional, sixth order dimensional. They intend to reach further into the universe than before, discovering not only new worlds but new energies, new configurations of their own energy manipulations, and a theory to be explored of return to their home—homes—home worlds in a new way, possibly requiring no time at all. Seven in number has been chosen for the reconfiguration of their manipulation of energy in new realms of travel, for together they form a network, a configuration.

Their departure will appear as nothing more than their becoming invisible, for in this mode they will take full advantage of the Extensor Belt and its energy field. They will exceed greatly in these configurations the rate of travel, far in excess, of what you call 'light speed.' Many are interested in their discoveries and they will be shared, for the community of worlds will benefit greatly. Their moment of departure has not been set, but soon. We wish them well, and bid you namaste.

Local craft of old

Dec. 20, 2012

JANU: UFO examinations as such pertain to craft generally speaking of origin beyond your Earth. However, there are those that originated here some time ago. They include those from the distant past and were as indigenous as humanity is—meaning not very.

These craft resembled a shaped wing, not circular, more angular, and manipulated energy with varying configuration. They created a field around them and used the field to interact with those of a more natural origination, origin. These craft circled your Earth and were inspiration for similar attempts at flight, to a small degree, in old Atlantis. And you piloted one of these, our brother, briefly. The earlier days of exploration and experimentation with life on Earth.

These craft could suspend themselves indefinitely in your atmosphere, at any altitude. They had areas of colorful glowing light, depending upon their energy field and its concentration. They explored the seas, the oceans. They could remain stationary in the seas at depth. The surfaces, although angular, were rounded. Communication was by manipulation of natural energies rather than transmissions of energy. They modulated, so to speak, subtle energies on a level that provided instantaneous communication.

Transportation by manipulation into other realities

Jan. 29, 2013

JANU: What more to say, then, of this area of interest into UFOs, better described as “Extraterrestrial Craft”? Unidentified to some but not to others! Currently, they are seen as the only mode of transportation between worlds. This is not the case, our brother. There are projection technologies of physical transportation. There are subtle reality technologies for transportation as well. Humanity currently sees physicality as immutable. It is not.

Craft and individuals can move from one reality to another by adjusting their frequency, if you will, outside of the limitations of physicality, making transportation much easier, even beyond the physical limits of speed, time and space, distance. Humanity will embrace this in the future and exploration of the universe will take on new reality. The craft will continue to serve a role as vehicles for the movement of materials, as their frequency is adjusted by the technology of these craft, you see. And, of course, these craft, when adjusted, can pass through otherwise solid objects, including worlds and moons. An interesting opportunity to explore the resources of a world from within.

Now, each new reality adjusted to has its own, as you put it, parameters of existence, its own properties and characteristics. And the mapping or discovering of these initially will be of most importance. So the reality, you see, of UFOs, so to speak, is much larger than you might imagine. So, as humanity views interplanetary travel as a future reality, not so for those who have been your way countless times.

Now, you ask, “Can an individual without a craft achieve this freedom?” Yes, our brother, an individual may, but the craft offer assistance and support and the transportation of materials, you see, you would call cargo. There have been those who’ve moved about your world in this manner, having achieved the freedom to raise their consciousness and vibration, so to speak, and have altered the state of materials to achieve freedom from gravity for a time.

Let there be no doubt, then, that these realities exist. Atlantis did not have this ability but may in the future. You think of disease and the overcoming of such. In the future, our brother, the imbalances in existence and in being will be overcome to such a degree disease will not even be thought of and the passing of existence from one reality to another will be by choice. Humanity has been absorbed and obsessed with the limitations of frailties and lifestyles that cause these. We see coming in the near future what might be called the consciousness movement of personal development and group performance. A grand time to come, of achievement and freedom as true co-creators of awakened intelligence and maturity.

An introduction to The Seven from Space

March 11, 2013

JANU: I am Janu speaking, welcoming you then to this morning's session of UFO examinations, a subject that bears some examination as to its diversity and nuances. Let us begin today by saying that there will be coming, in the near future, more opportunities to witness these craft and the eyes of humanity will open. The challenge, then, is for humanity to embrace the truth of life that has existed since before humanity existed. It is time to awaken, our brothers, and reach into the memory of the soul, of the spirit, for the answers are there.

We have with us this morning such a one of this truth of life, who comes to us in response to these inquiries and connections.

THREE FROM SPACE: Yes, we are three and we are here. We come to you at this time to validate, if you will, what has just been said. We have long considered being among those who open the doors of human consciousness to our reality. And we are real, our brother.

The wonders of life are even wonders when known of, for they continue to demonstrate that there is so much more to learn and experience. We of this caste of life enjoy this opportunity to introduce ourselves to the human reality of your world. We are, at this time, this moment, a projection in consciousness as is yours.

But we do use craft of our design and making and these craft are more egg-shaped or ovoid than your current depictions. This is done to facilitate the better use of natural cosmic energies and forces, that play upon the surface of our craft, with more uniformity and control. Our configuration does not create turbulences that are energy wasters. We are more efficient in this technology.

We have the appearance of somewhat human, with variations. Some of us have a slight blue tinge to our features. Some have a hint of green, light green. And some tend toward the pale orange, not exactly, though.

We address these issues of communication and eventually contact with humanity to further our investigations of other worlds, cultures, philosophies, and understandings. We have journeyed in this manner for countless eons of your time and recognize those of you who reach out as do we. Our interest primarily is the encouraging of a new species, new in terms of interplanetary consciousness and contact, to open to this journey of life, for so much to be revealed to the current nature of human consciousness and its fears and conflicts. None of these will survive in the future for it will become plain to everyone that these anomalies of emotions, attitudes, and actions keep you from what you will grow to value and cherish on the path of life.

We would participate in further conversation at other times. Let us be known as, for connection, the ‘Seven from Space.’ We withdraw at this time, thanking you for this communication.

A journey through an artificial wormhole

April 23, 2013

JANU: For this morning’s opportunity, let us attune to the rallying of a group of craft that are experimenting with trans-dimensional travel. Of course, the nature of this travel is quite different from physical travel. These craft will configure themselves in position and in energy configurations to alter their density, create a vortex for travel—your scientists might call a wormhole—and generate this at will and travel in this way. They are performing this some distance away from any star system to avoid disruptions.

Let us begin at this time to monitor and journey with this experiment. This shall begin momentarily and we will anchor our connection with a crewmember, the captain of one of these craft, as they prepare for this shift. We are connecting in such a way as to not distract.

The vortex is forming, which they perceive, as do we. Changing colors, radiating light, altering the material reality. And the vortex absorbs them, more than they traveling into the vortex, you see, for they have become the focus for the vortex and its source. As they are absorbed, they enter a kind of limbo, not controlling their experience.

The pattern of their relative location spatially remains but location becomes a non-reality in the vortex. This will last a few moments.

It is interesting to note that their materiality is preserved in a kind of memory pattern, for they have ceased to be quite so physical. The memory pattern partially is in their own consciousness and that is linked to a pattern that exists at the other end of the vortex, for the vortex is non-physical but each end of it is. This is how the vortex interfaces with different locations in the universe.

They are nearing the end of their vortex journey which is not a great distance from their starting point, several light years. Refinement in their techniques will extend this and give them some control of the end of the vortex and its location in the universe. They are none the worse for wear, delighted with their achievement, exploring their environs as part of their planning, as well as their return. They emerged near another star system and they’re calculating their location.

A most interesting journey, our brother, with more to come. Namaste.

Being examined by three UFOs

Aug. 5, 2013

JANU: Let us turn the tables, so to speak, today for this journey, for the UFO to do the examining, you see. So, as we connect with a UFO and its crew, we open to examination and respond to any enquiries within the framework of mutual benefit. Let us listen, now, for this to proceed.

There are three enquiries, three different UFOs in the queue, the first being a ‘mother ship’ resting nearby within this solar system. The enquiry proceeds as to your relationship with, or history with, extraterrestrial craft. Let us respond by saying that, in another existence, you have piloted at least one of these, are familiar with many of their journeys, have a natural affinity for the reality of this existence, the UFO existence, and the cultures that operate them. You've had seven lifetimes, or sojourns, with direct involvement spanning great distances from the Earth. And they are as another home to you.

The next enquiry comes from the second craft wanting to know the nature of human consciousness, not having explored this, and the likelihood of acceptance of their reality. We would say at this time that the Earth is not ready for, generally speaking, direct involvement on any large scale, but will be as the result of much support from various factions. There is need for patience. There are others such as we, paving the way, so to speak, and are committed to this.

The third craft enquires as to humans willing to leave the Earth to explore and return with greater understanding as to relationships with extraterrestrials, especially those who are aware that many of us already are involved with the Earth. We respond with considering that such involvement would be carefully planned as to the maturity of the individual, or individuals, and the nature of the exposure to other species, their worlds, and the conditions of their lives and values. But there are a number of humans ready for this, to be selected by a process of careful examination, for we desire that the results of this benefit the raising of consciousness of humanity to these realities.

Much to be considered. We thank our brothers from other worlds for their enquiries and welcome further enquiries for the purpose of mutual benefit. Namaste.

A craft on Mars

Nov. 16, 2013

JANU: For today's journey of UFO examinations, may we present ourselves on one of these that is currently resting motionless on another world. The crew are absent from the craft as we examine it. This craft has rather large, dome-like structures on top and bottom, centered on the craft. One might suppose they were for observation, but they are part of the design for managing energy, equilibrium, balance, in the presence of fairly intense forces. Observation is made possible through sensors.

The overall design is circular and disk-shaped. The surface is black in color. It does not rest on support devices on the ground, you see. The crew does not depart this craft through openings or doorways, but are transported energetically for these beings can vary their density. There are six of these crewmembers for this craft, each one with an assigned task, and they communicate telepathically among themselves and the worlds they visit. This craft is capable of trans-light speed by way of being cocooned in a controlled-energy environment. When traveling in this way, the crew and the craft alter their frequency.

Their current location is Mars, of your solar system. They are there examining your Mars rovers, and easily monitor the transmissions between them and the Earth. They have monitored other Earth craft and continue to do so, but do so without needing to be in close proximity due to the transmissions, you see. Earth is not the only world issuing craft of exploration, and this craft monitors many others.

This craft is as a chameleon, changing its reflected color to suit its purpose. This technology is not what you would call 'ancient' or pre-human. It is achieved by those with great capacity for research development, and personal, if you will, genius through awakening rapidly. So, unwise to compare Earth human conditions of achievement with theirs. Not a level playing field, if you will.

Thank you, our brother, and namaste.

A lunar mission to support others

Jan. 8, 2014

JANU: We have with us at this time the UFO encounter that lingers above your moon, on the far side, of course. This craft is stationary, geo-synchronous if you will, although capable of this position without the advantage of orbiting. This craft is waiting for rendezvous with a lesser craft on the surface. The lesser craft is surveying a site for a temporary lunar base to stockpile stores for other craft that are traveling great distances to support other craft. These bases are temporary for the needs change as new missions are developed.

This journey reveals that there is a vast network of activity with craft in many locations and realities. As you scurry about with your affairs of business in society, they are busy as well, at all times, in many locations, for many reasons. This morning's journey is an example. And their communication is not limited to electro-magnetic propagation, if you will, so the network is more closely monitored, connected. Namaste.

Earth UFO history and a craft near Spain

Mar. 3, 2014

JANU: We proceed to a journey when such craft existed in the skies of Earth as a fairly routine matter. This occurred many millennia in the past and Earth was being explored for possible colonization, research, and an examination of the development of the world.

In some interesting ways, Earth was terraformed, not just in physicality but in energetic realities as well. Much was learned and many processes begun. A world such as the Earth in its beginning, and the like, are not ignored to develop on their own. Interested parties are involved. Many of the craft were specially equipped for this task and their particular interest. Earth as a viable inhabitable planet was quite young compared to its existence as a body in space. Advanced cultures have come and gone, for various reasons. And there are embryonic cultures just beginning.

Many consider this universe as ancient. It is not. Not even middle-aged, so to speak, compared to many others. Some consider the physicality of the universe as part of a linear process to subtler realities existing. This is not the case. The universe evolves on all levels, co-existing, interacting. Life is a simultaneous reality, a collective, with an integrity that includes the evolution of all possibilities, UFOs being one element. We have examined some of these craft and the beings who operate them. Far more interesting and revelatory are exploring the societies that created them.

So, with this in mind, let us examine UFOs as a window into these other cultures. One such exists near Spain. A small craft, 60 feet in breadth, underwater and underground, for this craft has the ability to alter its molecular density, its vibratory rate, and co-exist with what might be called solid objects. It has a fairly stable and permanent presence. It's not only a monitoring station, but one that contributes to some stabilization of Earth's dynamic forces. It is not the only one. If you looked for it physically, you would not find it, for it is not quite physical, you see, but could be.

There is much going on in the Earth energetically in subtler realities. This craft is quite thin, if you will, compared to its 60-foot diameter. It is not inhabited, but is automated and can move throughout the Earth, and remove itself from the Earth, by remote direction and automation. Namaste.

The arrival of spacecraft D-1

Apr. 27, 2014

JANU: For this morning's journey, let us first respond to an immediate call from one such as to the beginning of its journey into your region of space. It is seeking a communication interface to facilitate in part its mission of becoming a sentinel in space, a gateway, so to speak, for assisting and monitoring the Earth and humanity as it prepares for, in most part unknowingly, a greater involvement in life beyond the Earth.

This sentinel, as it approaches, will be a conveyance of understanding, not just to its culture but others as well, as a web of communication in many modalities. We acknowledge this call and stand ready to assist. The code name will be "D-1" and will announce its arrival and readiness. We look forward to this arrangement and will assist as we may that which serves humanity and its awakening.

Derelict craft passing near the solar system

June 2, 2014

JANU: May we begin this morning by announcing that a derelict of sorts is moving into the vicinity of your solar system. It is an abandoned spacecraft, no longer functioning. And it will not collide with anything in your system, but pass nearby.

This derelict of which we speak is a craft of an immense size and has not passed this way before. It is leftover from a derelict world, the civilization or inhabitants of which have moved on. This craft was abandoned as of no interest and no worth. If detected, it can be seen in your northern hemisphere, one to two years from now. But being very dark, will probably not be detected visually. It will eventually collide with another object and cease to exist as such. There are artifacts on this craft that will be of interest in understanding the culture that built it. And it is tumbling, slowly. It will pass by near the outer limits of your solar system.

There are many derelicts in space. This is but just one. Most are not near your system. This older craft is not circular but elongated with an irregular surface. It has been impacted by small objects over its long journey, therefore the tumbling, you see.

The beings who create and use UFOs

June 28, 2014

JANU: UFO examinations must also include the beings who create them, their society, and those who operate them and their missions. So many of these have been in existence since early human history. For this morning's journey, let us examine the archive of knowledge of this reality. Let us make clear at the onset that the human term "unidentified" mostly applies to human ignorance and perception.

Earth has been visited many times by these craft for many different reasons. The quest for exploring new life and new truths is not unique to humanity, our brother, for this is the driving force for many of these civilizations that produce such craft and take their journeys. There have been craft of amazing design, including huge craft designed for long voyages, accommodating the needs of many for the duration of lifetimes. Many new technologies for sustaining life, mastership of energy density, trans-reality manipulation, creation of space/time vortexes and what you call 'wormholes' for your instant travel.

The offspring of these understandings and abilities, in some cases, generated civilizations, cultures, that transcended time/space barriers for them to become energy beings, moving in and out of physicality at will, overcoming inertia. Some experimenting with devices to induce these changes was employed, including for their craft as well. Their lives are filled with the many experiences of these changes and so they see the humanity of the Earth as they once were. Much of humanity sees them as saviors to rescue humanity from its own creations and the limitations of physicality and small-mindedness. They understand the folly in this.

There are those who experiment with the idea that travel without craft is another threshold to master. Many new thresholds of discovery to come.