An alternative to the definition of humanity as a species

March 6, 2000 C

JANU: To start with, let us begin by pursuing the evolution and eventual outcome of the journey of humanity. To embrace understanding of such scope, one must herald the changes on the journey of awakening befalling mankind. There will come a time when humanity will elevate in consciousness and relationship with life to the point where it will consider an alternative or expansion to the definition of humanity as a species and culture. This will come about, not because of looking for change for change's sake but because the awareness of the human consciousness will be seeing life in a larger way.

This change will also bring about a new understanding in the area of exploration of your universe. The physical travel to other worlds and moons and celestial bodies will move through three major changes in technology. The first being the organization of matter into new configurations of energy releasing patterns for movement through what you call space. The second being the ability to reorganize your own physical vehicle in such a way as to pass through the limits of movement in the denser reality you now enjoy. The third being movement in consciousness in such a concrete way as to bring about physical experiences with physical influences in your flesh bodies. These three pivotal points will render you fit for journeying through life, exploring the rest of your universe in such a way as to bring about the realization of other realities wherever you choose.

The patterns of life are subject to re-creation, dislocation, and initiation, in any venue. When properly engaged on life currents, life flows. You will so thoroughly embrace and be one with the motion of life that its motions will become as a direct extension of your consciousness. Humanity's destiny will leap beyond these things and in time, dear one, you will understand and participate in the creation of universes. We would have you understand these things for the purpose of laying the foundation for understanding and acceptance of revelations on your doorstep.

Removing blocks to the conscious embrace of human destiny

Nov. 2, 2000 A

JANU: I am Janu speaking and it is pleasing to see at this time that we have achieved a greater measure of success in the coming together of our two realities, our two consciousnesses, our two vital presences. Let us continue this and we shall achieve even greater success.

To establish or find routes of connection in communications of this nature, it is best that one proceed along fairly carefully defined and shaped or designed lines of progress. These accomplishments in relative consciousness belong to an order of established monks that existed at a time, and still do, for that matter, in the annals of the human adventure. These monks prescribed these arrangements to begin with the assimilation of the larger truths of being in the neophyte's growing consciousness. These we have begun nicely and will continue to proceed with. These monks also prescribed a measure of, a modicum of, awareness of the world and human conditions leading to an appreciation of the design and destiny for the movement of a world. We will grow in this as time goes by, allowing our destiny together to manifest its potential.

We will proceed with this at this time in the manner of aligning ourselves with the so-called energy grids that play a larger role in the organization of life for your world than some might imagine. These grids are structured in many ways, or patterns, having to do with frequency, refraction of the planes of existence, shifting compounds of subtle substance, and the feedback loops that are essential to these structures. Feedback systems essential for self-correction or continuation of intended course, allowing for modifications as things proceed.

We would have you know at this time that there will be coming to your world a system of structures leading to the annihilation, if you will, of those factors of human consciousness that continue to mask its conscious embrace of its own destiny. This is not an arbitrary imposition, but an agreement with, and initiated by, your world's participants. It is essential, so essential, for those who are awakening to be a beacon of stability, confidence, assuredness, and understanding for those who are stripped away of these blinders, that they not be overwhelmed with the magnitude of what lies before them and who they truly are. We implore you, and those of your understanding, to accept this mantle on the benefit of your companions on the greatest adventure of their journeys thus far.

Precognition of life to come: introduction on the destiny of humanity Nov. 28, 2000 A JANU: We have with us this morning an opportunity to proceed in a direction known to us as belonging to that which ascends the scale of life to preclude unknowingness. Now then, to deal with this opportunity at this time, we must have at our disposal your attention on this matter called precognition of life to come for the destiny of nations and worlds. In our case this morning, we shall attend to the destiny of humanity.

Precognition, then, as an opportunity to serve the Orders of Life shall include a knowledge or knowingness of the intent or the potential inherent in the opportunity for life expression. We begin this episode by admiring the simplicity and the beauty of the intent of the human journey. Comes as no surprise to those who journey in this way that humanity is divined or destined to become one of a number or collection of journeys that relate to a collective destiny which includes humanity. Now then, to foresee or foretell this requires only a more abstract connection with the destiny of life itself, for humanity, you see, is in this composite and will serve to define the element needed in its completion.

This element of which we examine at this time is characterized by a sense of underpinning the forum for exchange or, in your understanding, discussion as to the order of the thresholds or stagings of the development of the collective destiny. Humanity affords this service by demonstrating its mastership of thresholds of progressed life. Humanity in its integrity is one threshold or stage of life progression for the journey of consciousness, beingness, spirit or divine life that includes humanity as a part thereof. This may seem vague and abstract to some but to we of this destiny it is reasonable and sensible course to conclusion. Humanity has a tendency to view life as if it were the central purpose for it. As in all things, the more inclusive understanding embraces other possibilities simultaneously.

Please be aware of this movement of life, now and how it pertains to your growing understanding of its rich tapestry. Namaste.

Moving beyond the mundane

June 28, 2001 A

JANU: I am Janu speaking, pleased to announce the portrayal of an adventure in understanding as to the distance achieved by the founding fathers of the human journey. We speak now to this matter, in an attempt to bring understanding as to the larger view of life.

Humanity, then, is seen, from the perspective of these founding fathers, to include an anchoring point for the dismissal of those forces that bind the human consciousness, which traverses many realities, to the mundane aspect of living. These forces do little more than anchor the consciousness of humanity to its octave of life. It is time for humanity to achieve its potential in that octave beyond the mundane. It is therefore incumbent upon humanity to agree to sanction these forces and control their influence. The mundane is centered around survival which humanity has achieved sufficiently to demonstrate its achievement by using this base or foundation to master the rest of life. Mastering survival is not achieved only by surviving, but using this achievement to move beyond it. We would have you understand at this time that the life that awaits humanity beyond survival will, in time, seem more real and substantial than anything achieved thus far. We would bring home this point at this time as a foundation for understanding the destiny of humanity.

Human Destiny and the destiny of worlds

Nov. 7, 2001 A

JANU: We shall continue with today's exploration of the science of the stellar quandary of the attraction of worlds and the presentation of forces leading to their capture by outside forces. Distinct are the possibilities of recapture by those same forces that bring about change in the direction of the progression of worlds. From your perspective these enormous forces of nature pose no threat to the confines of human existence. They deal rather on the larger scale of the destiny of worlds and their counterparts in the realms, you see.

Understanding these dynamics of nature will bring about a change in the perspective of the course of life and the understanding of human destiny, for human destiny, you see, is somewhat larger than humanity itself in terms of terrestrial existence. These understandings pave the way to a grasp of human destiny beyond your current planets, relationship with humanity, all forces of influence. For the creation, attraction, manipulation, organization, and development of worlds are not limited to physical nature, you see, for these are governed by the Hierarchy of Life consciousness and the prevailing destinies set in motion and refined across the scope of reality that time cannot describe, you see. Humanity's destiny is better understood in light of this and we would have you know that your growing grasp of this reality plays a significant role in some of these interactions.

In a sense, human destiny is in its infancy, barely self-aware and much less aware of the self of the rest of life. This is the key threshold for the movement of human life in the fulfillment of its destiny. Worlds become conscious in similar fashion, with their thresholds of awakening and mastery. These thresholds are assisted by key ingredients in the tapestry of life's structure, as they are for humanity, you see. Let us summon now, then, these understandings to the forefront of our investigation, to better appreciate the nature of life and its infinite possibilities.

The climax of human understanding and achievement

Dec. 2, 2001 A

JANU: May we proceed then with this evening's understanding, giving way to that which is couched in terms of fabled lyricist Jokeem Haladeuce: "Par empt nutadthra sequetah tormehvah." We come together in peace and understanding from this day forward, you see. Let us rise, then, to the occasion of this understanding and proceed in the direction known to be a climax of human understanding and achievement, the noble frontier to quest for.

Humanity's shining moment will be achieved as it addresses its true nature and its purpose for being. Humanity is a thing dreamed of and it will produce a platform for the achievements of others. Humanity in the larger understanding is a steppingstone in the making for the adventures of another whole theme of life. Humanity's contribution will be that shining moment on the doorstep of its destiny. To this end we have wakened humanity to its purpose. The achievements then on this path of destiny are but moments along the way to completion. Those with the vision for this will see its destiny in each victory. We counsel you to be one of these and move accordingly in your understanding and in your service.

Dilemmas

Dec. 10, 2001 A

JANU: I am Janu speaking, seeing then at this time the opportunity to delve into what is coming up and soon to be announced as a penetrating look into the destiny of humanity as it was known long ago. The emergence of human consciousness beyond conventional wisdom, as you may put it, causes one to consider what has been accomplished thus far that carries into and through the dilemma of life. Each dilemma on the human journey corresponds to a prenuptial agreement contracted by the journeyer at the time of arrival to this plane of your existence. Each dilemma cautions the movement of life outside the parameters of existence that serve the original agreement, you see. When humanity ventures into its quest for power, shall we say, it runs headlong into these dilemmas, facing challenges to the wisdom of the pursuit. The dilemmas of life are nudgings for corrections on the path or journey, and, when carefully read, reveal the map of life as intended by the original agreement, you see. We linger in these areas of conflict and confusion for their importance is well-known as key turning points in the development of the human journey. When one lingers in their personal life on an issue, one would see this as a dilemma point initiated by the larger destiny of that life.

It is still misunderstood by many, the wisdom of co-existence of so-called free will and larger destiny. A balance must be struck between them, for they describe each other and yield a benefit neither can achieve on its own. Destiny describes the journey of the free will, and the free will fulfills it.

The destiny of the Earth and the destiny of humanity are one (Service) Sept. 4, 2002 A JANU: Well-spoken, then, this evening, tributes offered to serve the world. We should exchange this evening those vows needed that serve life through humanity in the area of the benefactor called Earth. For humanity has yet to fully realize that servicing the Earth serves humanity, both directly and indirectly. The destiny of the Earth and the destiny of humanity are one.

What is the Earth, then, that one would serve, but that collective of all life with any association of the Earth. How then does humanity come to terms with understanding the Earth's destiny and that needed to achieve it and how that relates to human destiny? Does humanity even understand its own? There are those that do, but few in number and uncertain as to how to communicate this to others. Let there be then a discussion on this subject to begin with the larger movements of life and the connection to that of the individual, whether it be human or animal or plant, or even, yes, the evolution of the mineral kingdom. Study then the movement of life, the evolutionary experience and the destiny each one points to, for all the kingdoms of life individually at first and then collectively. And in so doing the course is set for understanding life's direction, its potential, and its victories yet to come.

We serve this, this evening, the evolution and destiny of all life of the Earth. Grow in your perception of that which is beyond material aspect of any Earth life. All life has consciousness and energy and multiple realities and connections. There is a grid-like quality that brings mutuality throughout the spectrum of life. This can be seen as one becomes aware of one life touching another, mutually influential. Let there be, then, realized hope and promise for everyone and everything, for all are tied together and one cannot fail alone. To survive life, enrich each other. Then, through your connections and, doing so consciously and with conviction, become aware of your life connections, manifesting with greater wisdom, bringing clarity to the destiny of all life. The true power of peace is known as conflict is overcome, replaced with a new way of life. So be it, our brother, and namaste.

Understanding the pinnacle of its existence

Dec. 5, 2002 A

JANU: have, this morning, an opportunity to proceed along the lines of progressed understanding into the nature of human destiny. Let us begin then by assuming a more diligent role in the assembling of this information. The destiny of humanity portrays a movement of life that garners support from many cultures of many worlds, not that humanity is somehow set apart in a grander design than the rest of life, but it does serve its place in life's progression.

This motion of life, called human destiny, reveals to some a grander design of life, which describes at once the principle of life, its nuances, and its outcome. Human destiny achieves its pinnacle when it merges with that which is beyond human. This is accomplished when humanity realizes its full potential which will be a reality of light that will be known as a oneness, a purity of being beyond description by limited mind or thought. Now, by 'limited' we mean that which describes a reality in uncompleted terms, for the pinnacle of the human journey is an end and a beginning, united as one where a completely new thought of life is born. There will be no tracing origins of this new thought in terms of human achievement or there would be limitation in its expression. So the pinnacle of human destiny is not an outcome that can be described in completed terms alone, for all life, all creative thought has its destiny in new life and new thought, born anew.

This quality of life can be found in each moment of your day, if you will but embrace each moment in that way. So many of your days are conditioned with patterns of the past and concerns of the future that the birthing of new life and new thought is masked and held at bay. When the collective of humanity can be in this way, the pinnacle of its existence is realized.

The instrument of change and the wisdom of destiny

August 22, 2005 A

JANU: Beginning, then, this morning with recognition of the history of humanity on this planet. There have been many major advances, recognizing the need for surveillance of the nature of life, including human destiny. What then of the destiny of other species, other worlds, the Earth itself, dimensional existence, and sentient beings everywhere?

We would suggest that this approach to surveying life yields much of the purpose and function of existence of which humanity is a part. Destiny includes the continuation of a species, or a world as a platform for life, that it may realize its potential, its nature, and its wisdom. When one opens to elemental and collective destiny of the spectrum of life, one begins to gain the wisdom of the purpose and destiny of life itself. This alignment contributes to your own fulfillment by recounting the steps taken through the many achievements and a growing ability to appraise dormant potential. When one moves in this direction, one begins to understand the movement of life by what you call 'change,' and we do as well. Mastering change by initiation of it, guided by an intimacy of understanding and connection with the destiny and purpose of countless elements of life, one expands beyond individuality to become a facilitator of life. Your experience in the human drama, through incarnation, moves from the wheel of birth and rebirth into manifestation by act of will through the instrument of change and the wisdom of destiny.

Understanding destiny and the frustrations of hungry hearts

August 26, 2005 A

JANU: I am Janu speaking, welcoming this opportunity to, perchance, operate within the confines and convictions of numerous obstacles, as so they would seem, to the awakening of humanity. Let us examine, then, this opportunity to understand, as it were, the seemingly bedraggled frustrations of the hungry hearts for enlightenment.

There comes a time when, in each one's quest, to examine that which merits enthusiasm and that which does not. Many such quests have buried within them agendas of recognition, popularity, prosperity, control, and manipulation, or the illusion of power. These things tear apart the fabric of integrity, simplicity, and universal service. The reason being that they are fed by a passion for self more than for others, you see. The goal here is the realization of union of being, the being that is united with all else. When you look into one's heart and ego, frustrated with their quest, there may be these impediments.

Alternatively speaking, each one must garner support from those true inner strengths in harmony with life and the destinies of its expressions and participants. Yes, even harmony with those with self-destructive traits, for there is still truth, our brother, at the heart of their being that they are unaware of.

What then supplants frustration most effectively? And the answer is: freedom of spirit and conscience and consciousness. Destiny is not a rigid alternative to free will, as some would suggest. It is a direction of fulfillment of the completion of life cycles and the opening of new ones. A sense of destiny inspires, encourages, brings strength and focus into one's life. Not destiny imposed by others, but the destiny you have chosen as a complete being. Listen to your heart, then, brother, and speak to this in your understanding. Namaste.

The Nature of Humanity: its origins and destiny

September 23, 2005 A

JANU: I am Janu speaking, welcoming again this opportunity to proceed along the lines of progressed understandings of the nature of humanity, its origins and destiny. Understand, then, the journey of humanity, individually and collectively. We would summarize by saying that humanity was created to begin a new and marvelous journey through life that belongs to the decree of, ultimately, the Source of All life.

Now, having said this, let there be understood that there are many creators within the Creator, and humanity is one as well. To create a journey of a species of life that is ongoing, evolving, and a contribution to life's own realization, it must be endowed with the ability to conform and adapt, think freely, respond innovatively, and become its destiny. In this particular instance, the journey into individuality consciousness by the embodying spirits, if you will, and Spirit collectively, raises the possibility of grand design and experience and the owning of wisdom on the path of awakening to that which is greater than that which began in the beginning. For understand this, dear one, that life itself, meaning the All In All, is grander, more fulfilled, more realized for the journey of humanity.

Now, this is not exclusive to humanity but nonetheless cherished and significant. And understand this as well, our brother, that the human journey has many phases and the humanity of your world is only one, for humanity is a many-faceted reality occurring simultaneously on many worlds. You have brothers and sisters, and cousins, and relations far and wide. Related in the sense of original design and ultimate destiny. Your concern with the differences in races on your world is a continuation of individuality and what it has to offer. But the gift of this, sweet ones, is the understanding of strength through diversity and its foundation in the structure of life.

Now, diversity as such brings strength through coordination, synergism, mutual benefit, and the love of life within each, one for another. Through this reality is seen the vision of destiny and its path more clearly. You see, then, that humanity's place exists within a wondrous tapestry of life of many other destinies and contributions. Remember the strength of diversity is through connection and caring and giving. Humanity on your world will become such and it is its destiny. And through awakening comes these relationships.

The reading of the human journey

Dec. 5, 2005

JANU: I am Janu speaking, and we are thrust once more into enabled pro-demonstration of angular concepts of advanced hieroglyphics that pertain to the clocked or timed movement of life that degrades confusion for enlightenment. The mysteries of your world are held within the memory of all humanity. These records or memories are found in chambers or pockets of memory, even on a molecular and atomic level, and you move through each day a walking, breathing encyclopedic chronology of the human journey.

The glyphs of your current research, to include crop circles, are your own patterns, our brother, reflected in these phenomena. It is possible to discover patterns yet demonstrated to complete your journey of awakening and command of your birthright, that is humanity's for having lived it. To do so one must engage a more complete reality of the human being and its collective consciousness. In this collective, widen your view to include all sojourns of humanity, for these patterns of consciousness still exist imprinted. And the reading and understanding of the human journey and destiny is achieved by those who would serve it, whether human in experience or otherwise.

More is told and revealed in these patterns of life than in the libraries of your world. The awakening of humanity includes this experience and resource for the regaining of wisdom and the embrace of destiny.

The unified destiny of Earth and humanity

Feb. 7, 2006

JANU: Let us begin then this morning by prevailing upon those who are benign in those efforts to bring well-being to human consciousness. Stating quite clearly their effort to begin a dialogue with those who serve the Light of Understanding. We would share at this time the knowledge that bringing to the spring of your time, this year, we shall engage upon the dynamic of Earth Changes of a noticeable nature, both long and short term. Humanity and Earth flowing with life more harmoniously. There will be a conscious dialogue, not in words but in awareness, between humanity and the Earth as living entities, individual and co-existing as one. Let us bring those forces together then that merge these consciousnesses and bring about clarity of unified destiny, even day by day. This proposal reflects sound judgment and reasoning by those who stand for life.

The physical body

April 21, 2012

JANU: I am Janu speaking, merging, then, that which is needed to survey the progression of human destiny in ways yet unseen, beyond current understanding, you see.

Let us delve deeper into this subject and begin by examining the human vehicle, physical bodies, if you will. The changes to come have to do with structures that convey the movement of energies in and around the vehicles. The nervous system, for one, will be going through some radical changes, becoming more accustomed to energy flows and what some would call 'light propellants,' making more instantaneous thought transfer, powers of perception, and sensitivity to impression from all of life. The senses will heighten and convey deeper meaning and understanding. Changes in visual perception will become confusing at first, for the powers of selection and discernment will be challenged, due to overlapping visual layers of perception. The heightened senses, including hearing, will challenge selectivity, therefore the need to be able to focus selectively on the senses. The human vehicles have yet to achieve this control, but the awakenings will require this.

The diet or foods will change dramatically to a lighter or less dense variety. The desire for animal products, sources, will diminish in time. These periods of adjustment will last into the twenty-third century in your time, climaxing in the twenty-fifth. By then, early contact with other species will have begun, bringing new understandings, social structures, lifestyles. Many of these changes will facilitate perceptive abilities to fathom--to understand--the nuances of thought, philosophy, and presence of being of other species. Current understandings and abilities are too contained in current norms of society.

The human brain will manifest three new centers in response to these changes. They will facilitate the quickening of the powers of perception, self-examination, and the ability for significant changes by choice. Two of these will be located in the left posterior of the brain. Yes, and one in the cerebral cortex. These centers will be relatively small in size and go unnoticed for some time.

The human body will become lighter and generally thinner. Height will remain the same. The body will exhibit a greater ability to self-heal. Human illness or disease will give way to these changes. This is in preparation for exposure to other worlds. As you can see, many changes coming, in anticipation of significant changes in human activity.

Principles of life

April 24, 2012 A

JANU: We have with us this morning an attempt to persuade that which eludes so many to be revealed. What we address here is the elusive purpose of life for humanity, and what will become of it, or its destiny.

Let us examine, then this morning, the climate for such revelation. There must be that which ensues, forming this climate from the collective consciousness desires and heartfelt intent of humanity. What we see here at this time is much confusion. Confusion reigns when the principles of life give sway to the so-called eddy currents or side trips of experimentation, without the principles of life held as vision. The wars in humanity's current and past reality are such a demonstration of this. We would have you know that the traditions of war, though including individual moments of loving sacrifice, are also an attraction to those who see profit, aggrandizement, and power--personal power, national power—over others.

The climate of which we speak induces humans to—people to—live in fear, isolate, and lose faith in the power of the fundamental principles of life. This atmosphere can, must and will change as those who live with a growing clarity of conviction in the principles of life demonstrate them, nurture them, and express them.

You ask as to these principles, their nature. We would say that they exist in the form of reverence for life, hope for the future, an uplifting of all humanity, a caring for the continuation of life, and the service that honors everyone and every creature and every world.

This climate we speak of is what we serve and, through this, the realization of human potential. Let there be then an organization of thought, emotion, caring within the heart of each one, that the principles of life are cherished and continue their journey into fruition.

Climbing back into the driver's seat of your destiny

April 27, 2012 A

JANU: Our focus this morning compels us to a signature or a signing off on, if you will, that which condemns sloth and promotes expediency. Now, what do we mean by this?

There are those in your realm, in your world, who would perpetuate the status quo, the day by day by day existence and reject adventure, so to speak. Your True Nature, the spirit of humanity, will not remain confined, or bottled up if you will, forever. There is a kind of compelling, or movement if you will, to bring out that which ennoble humanity, enriches it, and serves its expansion in the Light known as the Truth of Life.

Yes, adventure is a frightening concept to many. Fundamental change seems to threaten that which has been built upon, layer on layer. What we see here is an opportunity to climb back into the driver's seat, so to speak, of your destiny. We can see this destiny and it is something to be cherished, looked forward to, planned for to a degree.

Yes, diplomacy is prominent in humanity's future, mastering this with each other, and ultimately with other worlds. Now, we are not talking about negotiating agreements. More, then, opening up cultures to their own destiny and agreement with life. Diversity throughout the universe, if you will, is a strength, to realize life's diverse potential, but more in cooperation than in competition. In this atmosphere, sharings of unique achievements prospers all.

Connecting with other worlds

July 5, 2012

JANU: I am Janu speaking, welcoming then this opportunity to speak to the coming events, the thresholds, if you will, of human destiny. Let there be then known, in the archives of life, there exists a pattern of acceptance of the divine right of life, that being the imperative of life to continue.

Human destiny, as such, is involved in this by way of that which claims the upholdment of life not of your world. There is a tendency in human consciousness to see the Earth above all else on the platform of life, the range of life, you see. There is coming, then, a growing appreciation of, and commitment to, affording the same rights, the same imperative, to life on other worlds. This will come to the fore and be tested when this life is discovered and contacted, by any means. For, in time, humanity will perceive their common ground with these lives, their aspirations, and their challenges, and, in due course, humanity will assist. For you will encounter lifeforms and societies not as advanced as your own, technologically. This will help you understand your connections, even though worlds apart.

This look at the destiny of humanity is not unique in the universe, and not unique to human experience of long ago. Earth is monitored from time to time by the presence of these among you as to your readiness for such contact. It appears as though, to some humans, that movement in this direction has insurmountable hurdles. Be it known, our brother, that certain events in the course of time can trigger rapid changes in human attitude and understanding. Let it be so understood in this way. Namaste.

Human Destiny: a string of shining moments

Aug. 8, 2012A

JANU: Let there be then the acknowledgement that the human journey, the human destiny is the journey, you see. And this destiny is as a string of points of light, starlight if you will, of occurrences, achievements, events, transformative understandings and contributions to the rest of life.

Let us begin then by examining that which looms nearby on this path of lights, that being the enrichment of the world upon which you live. Humanity's opportunity and capability to enrich this world is currently beyond human understanding, for the needs of the world are many, not just from human activity but from its own evolution as a world.

Your scientists are concerned about large impacts devastating the Earth. Be it known that there are those in the realms of vast energies who protect this world and those upon it, for Earth has a destiny too, you see, and does not include destruction by impact, you see. So humanity's opportunity here is to divest itself of the fears of doom and more in the direction of that which helps the Earth shine with its light, its health, and its fulfillment of what it can be.

The Earth is a magnificent collection of life elements and belongs in the hearts and minds of humanity as having enormous potential. Let us see then human destiny include a continuing opportunity on its path, through behavior, philosophy, attitude, and relationships, and energy, bring light to this Earth and all will benefit.

Engaging other worlds

Sept. 16, 2012

JANU: I am Janu speaking, here representing that course or path of the human journey that best describes its evolution into the system of worlds beyond your current experience as a society.

This journey will take some time for humanity to experience, for it is destined to become viable when certain developments in humanity take place, technology being one, but one of a number of others. Not only is human consciousness not quite ready for such engagement; your social structures, governments, military, and world tensions are not suitable. These changes will precipitate contact, not just for the interests of humanity but for the interests of those to be connected to. They have their needs and securities to consider. This connection with another world, another species, is so complex, with challenges and opportunities, that humanity must begin to think in these terms and relate to each other in this way. Human destiny will include such physical contact, but in time much more, for the realities of life are far more wide-ranging, energetically as well.

There will come a time when humanity is able to adjust its vibrational rate or frequency to communicate, interact with many levels or platforms of life. Humanity as yet, generally, has no awareness of the range of its innate capabilities, and still pursues survival in a limited understanding through wars and power struggles, and taking advantages of others. But all of this will pass.

Humanity has already made plans to populate other worlds. Think you not, our brother, that other worlds have considered this as well? And for a long time. This is how beings ultimately connect, outgrowing their own worlds.

Let there be, then, a coming together of the minds of your world, ready for a larger view of life and a larger responsibility for mutual support, harmonious engagement, and understanding. These will come in due time. Humanity will survive its current insanities and confusions. Namaste, our brother.

Challenges and opportunities

Oct. 29, 2012

JANU: The destiny of which you speak, being that of humanity, incorporates a wondrous journey, a path of enlightenment, and a growing service to life. Now then, this seems fanciful when reflecting upon the current consciousness of humanity as a whole. Understand that the human journey already includes individuals and groups that have a growing vision for the future; however, there is much to be accomplished in this direction moving forward. The destiny includes many upheavals, challenges in ideology, one to another, nation to nation, religion to religion, and the understanding of true profit beyond economics.

Humanity will gain insights from a variety of sources. There are many factions of life in and beyond the Earth that have an interest in humanity succeeding, not the least of which is other worlds, interstellar travelers, and the brotherhoods of Light. Humanity's evolution is along a very populated path of interested parties with much interest in the evolution of a common vision, in humanity, for its future.

The human psyche has yet to grasp the significance of human relationship with the Earth and all of its creatures. This must come into focus, into view for it will play a major role in the human understanding of life and service to it. There is great wisdom and memory and tradition, of sorts, in the collective lives of Earth's creatures, especially those that live in the seas, the oceans of the world, for theirs is an old tradition.

The visitors that come to Earth from time to time share much with humanity, behind the scenes so to speak. Humanity must awaken to the sovereignty of each other and its destiny. We see this culminating in humanity becoming a strong and wise presence in the universe, in its locale, for there are many wise humans who have yet to be heard from in a public way. But this communication must take place to assist the masses to appreciate what lies before them every day. Accepting and giving wise counsel to each other must come to pass, lowering the levels of suspicion and fear, and discover once more the power of truth and brotherhood.

The larger reality of human destiny

Nov. 29, 2012

JANU: Our journey today bespeaks of the culmination of many efforts to become one with the destiny of humanity. The human journey is far from being a lonely one. Humanity's journey has many components from many who are involved from many levels of life. These collections of interested beings and groups coalesce into a culmination of effort that brings humanity's journey to the brink of new thresholds, from time to time, thresholds in understanding, evolution, and consciousness, the ramifications of which progress the Earth and everything that it is. And realize this, our brother, that the human Earth journey is an inspiration for and an assistance to the entire system, Solar System, in ways not understood yet.

So, the involvements in human destiny are complex, varied, and longstanding. The commitments extend well into the future, being a relative term, you see. Varying much in meaning, to those who perceive it in different ways. This morning's journey is to acknowledge and appreciate this diversity of support, the reasons for it. We, meaning humanity and those who assist, are becoming more and more one life, one movement in a direction of fulfillment. Now, what looks like ordained destiny is really the fulfillment of countless plans of assistance, direction, and enlightenment to reach many goals. For humanity and its journey are by no means alone in life. They are part of life and one with so many others.

It is time for humanity to begin to appreciate its role in life and the lives of others. No longer an island in the middle of nowhere, but part of the system of life and its flows and countless destinies. In the area of health and healing alone, the story is vast and ongoing. The realizations you call 'genius' and the many who develop humanity's journey through health has yet to be told in its entirety. The conventions of life apply as you awaken, being the courtesy of acknowledgement, gratitude, and service. In fact, a predisposition to these opens the door further to engagement.

The future of humanity

Dec. 5, 2012

JANU: I am Janu speaking, welcoming, then again this morning, that which belongs to the future of humanity. And by 'future' we mean that which is to come, both soon and at some distance. The future of humanity rests with not only the choices or decisions of humanity, but the disposition, if you will, of the Earth and the Heavens, so to speak. There are many changing conditions everywhere, and they all impact their neighbors.

So to say “the future of humanity is secure” is a bit naïve. But the opportunities for humanity are great indeed, for humanity is more than the physical bodies, and even this planet Earth. Humanity is the memories, the experience, the wisdom, the intent of those who inhabit these bodies, for even if the Earth were no more, the idea and the momentum of humanity still lives on.

So be not in dismay that changes are coming, for these changes do not eliminate or terminate the human consciousness. Physicality is but a small part of the expression of human consciousness and its destiny. We are not suggesting a fatalist approach here, but one of balance, openness, and consideration for continuation. And what is it that continues, our brother, no matter what? Consider this carefully when you contemplate dire changes.

More the reason, then, for the keeping of a vision for your future. Whether in the physical or not, there is a future. And the consciousness of humanity, all its beauty and potential, continues on, whether in this location or some other. Holding to this vision, and its growing clarity, fills one with hope and promise, and eliminates the fears surrounding survival. In the face of everything, whether small or large, hold to your vision of the future, its hope and its promise and its gift to life.

The human journey is rich and varied, more than you realize, and the forms of it are varied as well. So make the most of your current circumstance and form of expression. Capture its richness and its potential to carry with you into the future of humanity. So, your vision of the future can extend into the reality of the moment, for the vision of the future begins now.

Change from within

Dec. 10, 2012

JANU: The destiny you seek to understand regarding humanity must be revealed in such a manner as to permit the excursion into possibilities, for human destiny is rich with these. Destiny has a connotation with some of “ordained determination” or “fixed experience or outcome.” This is not the case, our brother. The destiny of life is a myriad of possibilities and the interaction with each other. The destiny of humanity is more fluid than some might think or perceive, but the possibilities are limited by the range of potential.

For this period in humanity’s destiny, let us examine its relationship with itself. This, on one hand, appears to be self-destructive, counter-productive, in endless loops of violence and struggle. There are, however, many other possibilities in the human journey at this time and there are those who cherish these. The arena of life on your Earth for humanity is a pendulum that can swing many ways. And there are many pendulums on the journey, our brother. They are in the form of economics, warring, co-creation, loving, forgiveness, peace, distrust, the many elements of human consciousness and behavior. To look at one pendulum, our brother, can be misleading and incomplete. So the pendulum we look at today is the one of direction of the collective human consciousness and it speaks of movement, our brother, in a direction of peace and determination for a better life.

Now, it is easy to blame those in so-called power for the direction of human consciousness, but their power is limited. The real change in the direction of peace is sprinkled throughout your culture, among the masses, if you will, with individual genius, moving life in that direction here and there. We support these efforts, these individuals with a vision for the future, that their influence take root and multiply. So this, our brother, is the model of change from within and not imposed from without. The inner vision of many growing, developing into a movement of life. This is the source of change for humanity. The miracle and the beauty of clear understanding owned in the heart and trusted in the mind and fed by the spirit. This is among the destiny of humanity. The masses not too aware of it yet, but it is coming soon. Change from within.

Giving and receiving the flow of life

Dec. 12, 2012

JANU: Today's subject "the Destiny of Humanity" has been of great interest for a long time, for many. The destiny of humanity can be observed as a relatively long-range observation, or even day-to-day. For this morning's journey we will observe or examine the near future. By this we mean this generation and the next.

Humanity's preoccupation with warring for problem solving among nations and people will continue for some time. For nothing, or very little, seems to be in the human psyche that carries the strength of emotion and fear as a powerful alternative to warring. This will come in time, for we see an event coming of a warring nature that will render observance of worldwide survival to humanity. And there will come one, and then several, and then many, who possess, embody, and inspire true strength of human unity and cooperation and mutual concern and an end to the devastation and loss of life from warring. So much so that warring will no longer be tolerated, and be considered an evil, an illegal course of action. The next generation will get a taste of this. It is difficult to convey a new message of understanding when few are listening.

Now those who prosper financially from conflict and dispute, and the armaments, must begin to see profitability in the fruits of peace, cooperation, the building of a new way of life. In 300 years hence, this will take root, with some years prior to this the beginning of this movement. One need not wait three hundred years for a better life. This can begin today, for the elements of these changes can be explored individually between people and nature and the creatures of the world, and in vision and the commitment of the heart to explore life beyond the Earth in this way.

One can experience the fruits of peace and creativity each day, and this is how this change begins, our brother. Individually. Be an example in your life to the alternative of war, conflict. There will come a time when one looks back and wonders how humanity could have lived under such conditions and allowed them to continue. But hard to see this in the midst of the pain.

So let the giving nature continue without the need for reimbursement, exacting a price, so to speak, for kindness. Reimbursement, then, realized from the goodwill of others and their nature to return something back to life. The flow of life, our brother, truly is the reality of receiving and then giving and then receiving and then giving. This is flow. This is power. This is peace. And this is joy.

The larger human family

Jan. 21, 2013

JANU: Let us begin, then, this morning a dialogue that speaks to the destiny of humanity. What then do we see here on the horizon for humanity as to its destiny? The destiny can be configured by the will of humanity, propelled by circumstance and the results of choices.

Yes, we know you are curious about scientific discovery as an aid to true human awakening and self-mastery. This will come in time, our brother, but not just yet, for science is still consumed with exploring physicality and has done well with this. But evidence will soon compel science to embrace subtler realities, for their physical science achievements cannot explain these. But the achievements of consciousness in these areas in some ways dwarf those of physical science. So let us assume that the progression of life with humanity, the evolution of consciousness, the quest for mastery of the self, and the fuller engagement of a larger life will be enough to compel this change.

We have spoken of human destiny in the long-term engaging other worlds and species and maturing enough to move to the stars, in harmony with the progression of life. Human destiny in its second term, and by this we mean the movement we have described, will render the need, the perceived need, for physical travel for discovery as secondary. Still useful, but not required to grow into a brighter future. Human destiny of your world will include the joining with other human natured species, forming a larger network of that body of life. Not to the exclusion of other species, you see, but the realization of humanity as being larger than your world's current experience. There are many worlds you will discover and communicate with, and a few you will visit, that are quite human, our brother, with variations on this theme.

Awakening to a larger human family

March 2, 2013

JANU: The destiny of humanity, in terms of potential, is realized according to the choices made during the journey, you see. Human destiny is a reality larger than your world, for humanity exists on many others. Human destiny for the Earth, which seems an island in space, is coupled with many others. Humanity in time will come to see that their destiny, their existence, is part of a larger scheme of life, and in time will be influenced more directly by the destiny of others. Your world will survive physically for this to occur, although many changes to come, you see, challenges.

The influence, in some ways, by the destiny of other worlds that are populated by humanity will come from the inner consciousness realization and communication across what you call time and space, without those limitations. As we are proving with these journeys, you see. The sharing of understanding will come, and through that, the mutual influence. And this will trigger a more rapid rise in consciousness and achievement for the humanity of the Earth.

Once again, awakening of the Earth humanity is essential and part of the human destiny. These journeys we take are a strong example to those who reach from within to understand that which is without. Your family of life is vast compared to that of the Earth, and in time humanity will see this larger family of life as their own in many ways. Not just to gain from, but to give to, for all parties benefit in the union, you see.

Humanity's destiny, of the Earth, will include—and is including—a richness born of awakening with each other and, in time, the Earth itself. For human physicality is the Earth, and the Earth is conscious and knows this. How can you claim victory in achievement of mastering life and your own being and, at the same time, decimate the world that gave you your human bodies and nurtures them, even with every breath you take? An awakened being is inclusive of all these things, for the awakened being perceives life in everything.

Let us continue, then, to explore this subject for there is much more to explore. The family of life needs this from everyone. Namaste, our brother.

Human destiny (Service)

March 14, 2013 B

JANU: I am Janu speaking, focusing then this evening on the service to begin with the march of humanity into a connected, cooperative, loving human consciousness. This may seem like an impossible reality at the time. It does not seem that way to us for the path of human destiny is not some vague mystic concept or reality. It is a coherent, reasonable, and miraculous path of evolution for, due to human nature, its root nature as it evolves in this direction, its service to life ever increases. For life takes care of itself, our brother, and has no desire to be irrelevant or self-destructive to the point of non-existence.

Humanity has made great strides compared to its early beginnings, even though it retains much of its past traditions of conflict for power. For wise is the one who sees not only this characteristic, but the ones that are coming, born of the traits of the moment that do exist. So what we serve this evening is the nurturing of, the supporting of human destiny through cooperation, and tolerance, and love for each other and of life.

Human destiny is not unique to the point of no similarity between its destiny and the countless destinies of other species who are on their path as well. As each path evolves, you will see the wisdom in mutual support. Let there be, then, a growing awakening of the true spirit of humanity. Let each one find their way on this journey to wonders yet imagined and the joy of a growing freedom to be an expression of their true nature. Let it be so, our brother, and namaste.

Humanity's origins and past

May 16, 2013

JANU: Prepared as we are for this morning's journey, let us delve into human destiny, which is its entire path of existence, not just the future, you see.

Human destiny has a past and its path includes life on other worlds, for the design of human physicality and potential for experience was not born just to the Earth but to the larger human family. Now, we are aware of current thinking, so-called scientific thinking on the evolution of humanity, from its beginning as apes and undiscovered 'missing link,' so-called, and its current existence. This perspective, this view of human destiny is based solely on fossil remains and other evidence of the activities of earlier cultures.

Let us say at this point, straight away, that this is not the origin of humanity as it exists today. Human destiny has suffered many changes, challenges, and restorations. Your world's history is rich with many human journeys, most of them from other worlds transplanted here as part of a larger plan for the use of the Earth as a platform of life experimentation, achievement, and wisdom-gaining. There were many visitations from other worlds, not with a plan to remain here on the Earth, but to experiment with many possible futures, developing, modifying, and then planting the seeds of those achievements here or there. Much of the development was in the area of consciousness and physical modifications to interface with reasoning and processing and mastering the Earth for survival. This was not done en masse but with one or two here or there, a few at a time, you see.

You ask of the indigenous human being. This is a limited view, for no world exists from its beginnings populated, you see. That comes later as the world becomes viable as a platform of life. There are some involvements, experimentally, in directing the manifestation of a world to be suitable, where possible. Inevitably, the question of Mars arises and its destiny and life. Humanity existed there as well, longer than it exists on the Earth. Exploration of Mars will reveal many artifacts, confusing at first as to their origins and what became of life on Mars. The link between Mars and Earth on the path of human destiny will be discovered in time, adding to the picture, the scenario of the larger family of humanity. The evidence is there and Mars is not the only world involved in the past of human destiny and its path.

The solar system is a dynamic and living reality, with much history and much future. Worlds yet to be developed, remembering that a moon can be a world, and already is. So to put your finger, so to speak, on one grand existence of humanity in its beginnings has too many variables and elements. For the Family of Life includes more than physicality, bodies, if you will, with consciousnesses that incarnate, come and go, and their experiences and wisdom flavor the stew of life.

Yes, we shall return to this, our brother. Most interesting. Namaste.

A holistic relationship with the Earth

July 7, 2013

JANU: The story of humanity continues, relevant to a destiny that is filled with many adventures, discoveries, and changes. The first change we would speak of this morning has to do with humanity's relationship with the survival of the Earth. Its perceptions and attitudes are immature but the seeds of maturing are growing and, as usual with humanity thus far, stimulated by reversals of fortune. Much of humanity has little or no consciousness intimate with the Earth and its consciousness, seeing most things materially. The discoveries, or at least part of them, that must take place for the maturing of humanity in this area comes from awakening to inner sensitivities, perceptions, and communication.

This already exists here and there, but not in a mainstream way for those in power and business. They respond primarily to challenges to their fortunes, their resources, and the marketplace, not realizing that the alternatives they look for are not the finding of other resources of a physical nature, but a whole new world of understanding as to the nature of life, and the Earth, and themselves. A holistic approach to embracing the future and a sustainable world.

Observe the health and well-being, or lack thereof, endured by the masses and the medical profession's inability to overcome these. Holistic understanding and behavior is the theme here, and learning what that means. The timing for humanity's true service to the rest of life and other species and worlds is through awakening to a holistic relationship with life.

One of the purposes of these journeys is to support this, for in a very real sense, this will be humanity's salvation from its current immaturity. So the parochial concerns must be tempered with, balanced with larger ones, whether immediately profitable or not. For ultimately they serve humanity in a more profound way.

Let there be, then, a continuation of these efforts to plant seeds of understanding.

Exploration and Discovery

Aug. 27, 2013

JANU: I am Janu speaking, continuing then this observation of the saga of humanity and its many adventures. What we see in the course of things is humanity entertaining the notion that their destiny is configured by forces that belong to other realities, other realms. And, of course, this is true, for humanity's configuration includes these realities and forces, for the human conscious mind, personality-ego, is not conscious of its complete True Nature. For this reason, the Deity that they worship is a composite of their True Nature and Life itself. The closest reality they are conscious of produces a likeness but unreachable, unknowable, for what reference do they have, other than their physical humanity? And therefore a name must be given, of which there are several throughout humanity.

Humanity's awakening to the larger realities of its own existence is part of its destiny. Awakening is challenging for old concepts and models of existence in perception have light shone on them for what they are, and they must fade into the distance in the presence of this light for more profound understanding to take their place.

The destiny of humanity includes many new adventures, not only in exploration of the universe, but in exploration of who they are. Humanity will see, in time, that there exists a brotherhood, all humanity, far more diverse in appearance, in consciousness, in values, in philosophy, than they can imagine at this point. And their identity will change, for the examples that are before them must be considered by virtue of their presence.

Humanity thinks of Earth as its source of existence. It is a contribution to its existence, but not the only one. Humanity's destiny is more assured than one might realize, for humanity is much larger than what is considered. And all of humanity, even the larger reality of humanity, is motivated to progress. For a time, humanity will see fit to have colonies in many locations, through the solar system and elsewhere, that are not particularly habitable, for the purpose of exploration and expansion. Habitats, if you will. But humanity's destiny on the Earth itself will include some of these for the same reason. As long as there is a mystery, an unknown reality, humanity will attempt to explore it and, at times, exploit it. Some of these exploitations will be to its peril and this is a learning process as well, you see. For the times, the potential of discovery obscures safety and self-preservation.

There have been experimentations in human history to develop, of their own design, lifeforms. This generally has met with failure, for human consciousness, on a conscious level, is not a completely balanced maturity for the creation of life. Many agendas not in harmony with larger understanding. But these experimentations will continue, here and there. More profitable would be the pursuit of exploring their own development in harmony with their innate potential and the other Orders of Life.

We see a bright future here, with many dynamics, successes and failures, so to speak. But, over time, a meaningful contribution to more and more of life. Thank you, our brother, and namaste.

Human destiny, Earth destiny, and reaching for the stars (service) Sept. 26, 2013 B

JANU: Human consciousness rails against what humanity has created. It desires greater freedom through awakening. It's aware of its potential and the unlimited possibilities of life but has challenges getting humanity's personality and ego to let go of obsessive relationships with the mundane.

The destiny of the Earth, on the other hand, functions differently, for its destiny is different, but it understands what humanity has created and the struggle that has been created for the Earth as a result. The Earth tolerates and accommodates much of the human destructive patterns, but they are causing the Earth to consider somewhat more drastic means.

The journey of humanity to the stars will in time be facilitated by the beginnings of contact with the larger human family, especially those who are aware of the technology needed for humanity's early attempts. Humanity needs educating to the reality of balanced and harmonious involvement and this has begun in some circles, some individuals and some groupings. Our journeys reflect this. We are looking less for a few to lead but for more of the masses to awaken to their own creativity and capacity for genius and a love for life. Along with this will come a vision for their future that will pale their obsessions with the mundane. Humanity has a blessed future but unaware of it.

Human destiny has many options Oct. 18, 2013

JANU: Let us consider this morning, on the subject of human destiny, humanity's options. Which sounds strange when one perceives destiny as a destiny with a purpose that can be defined. Humanity does have options, and destiny is not a fixed quantity, but a range of options, rooted in the innate capabilities of the human vehicle and its oversoul or guiding consciousness, True Nature if you will. The options, some of which are as follows:

Humanity may choose to isolate itself, for a time, for self-discovery, maturation, and expansion into new capabilities.

Humanity may choose to withdraw into the past, to resurrect lost faculties, forgotten memories, and renew patterns of exploration long since abandoned or forgotten.

Humanity may choose to embrace other worlds and re-engineer itself based on these discoveries.

Humanity may choose to move in the direction of non-physical reality, a more etheric existence, leaving behind the limitations—and the opportunities—of time/space to further enhance and enrich its path of discovery and exploration from that point of view.

Humanity may choose to focus upon a life of service with that being its predominant focus in living, in life, realizing that service can manifest throughout the universe: past, present, and future; whether on Earth or not.

Humanity may choose to, at some point, leave the Earth entirely and start anew elsewhere, for various reasons.

There are many options for human destiny and they all belong to the root cause for human existence, and that being: to enrich life. Any of these options can be explored, even now, in consciousness, and the range of possibilities in each option. Many other species on other worlds have options as well. This is why the destiny of other human worlds may look entirely different from that of the Earth. Humanity has all of these capabilities and more.

Humanity's righteous future

Nov. 17, 2013

JANU: Today we embark upon a path of so-called 'righteousness' for humanity. For its path has that heritage, its future is righteous and will be a shining example to the mystery and evolution of life. Humanity has profound, deep compassion and passion for life, to survive, to excel, and to give. The Earth humanity will be known in the future as a 'giving' world, nurturing, uplifting inspiring, and leading others into their true righteousness. What better legacy for humanity to hang their hat on, when all is said and done, and then continues?

Humanity is on what you might call a 'shakedown cruise' working out the inconsistencies, the disharmonies, the confusions and distractions. Those who incarnate in the future, for humanity, are destined to become not only leaders of the Earth but of other worlds as well, for these are not limited to or restricted to incarnation on the Earth. Remember that the destiny of humanity is the destiny also of those who incarnate into it. The Family of Life, our brother, is more than physicality. But physicality is a part of it.

In time, consciousness will pass the threshold of human awareness and become aware of the many species and worlds that have been experienced in this way. Perspectives will change. Outlooks will change. Relationships will change. And, yes, physiology will change as well. And the consciousness, more awakened, will contribute to these changes. From a confused and dark history, humanity has a righteous future to behold.

More of human destiny

Mar. 31, 2014

JANU: Questions arise such as: "Will humanity reach the stars?" and for most this means physically. The answer is 'yes' however with caveats. Travel in linear space and time not realistic. However, a particular breakthrough is coming in technology to circumvent Einstein's laws governing maximum speed and the discovery will render the seeming obstacle as overcome quite easily and produce new ways of thinking, of perceiving life, and the so-called 'laws of nature.' Physics will have a new dimension to consider.

The challenges then will become controlling this new technology for accuracy and the survival of passengers making such a journey. There are beings from other worlds who have mastered this long ago and have refined it in brilliant ways. But humanity will learn in time that physical journeying is by no means the only way, or the most productive and rewarding, not to mention efficient.

In time, the ability to travel non-physically will unite humanity with solutions to the illnesses of the day, connecting the physical with new understandings of maintaining physical health and well-being. In time, humanity will incorporate some of the features, elements, of non-physical life into the physical experience, a merging, if you will, bringing a whole new set of realities to incarnate life. Of course, these changes occur hand in hand with the choosing of humanity to willingly discontinue self-destructive and limiting behaviors and concepts. In time, humanity will learn the art of incarnation beyond the birth process with a whole new set of challenges and opportunities.

Needless to say, all of these changes will radically alter society, civilization, and the norms of relationships, individuals becoming less dependent upon organized government, if you will, and the religions of the day. And life spans will take on new meaning. It will be the result of choice.

Much to come, our brother, and this is only a glimpse. Time once more for the awakening of humanity to meet this responsibly, maturely, and maximize the opportunities in a constructive way. Namaste.

Greatness in human consciousness

Apr. 30, 2014

JANU: Straightaway, as you put it, may we progress to an understanding that achieves a greatness in consciousness for humanity. Many of these journeys of interest for the evolution of humanity are apropos to many species on other worlds who are journeying into their future. Greatness for humanity's consciousness will include these others and their desires to achieve. Greatness in human consciousness must include the consciousness of others, for their lives are connected in their destiny and in their service to life.

The focus for this morning's journey is the expansion of human consciousness into a greater depth, a greater command of life, and a greater understanding and compassion for others. Humanity will become, is destined to become, a bright star in life, a shining light of achievement over adversity—self-created adversity, which is the most difficult to overcome for it is born from within one's own choices. Humanity has yet to achieve this mastery but it will.

Human consciousness must embrace the larger life as a part of its own reality, and through this it will come to understand and know its own nature and the developing reason for its existence, which is far beyond the Earth experience. In time, the Earth will become a meeting place for many cultures, many species. And humanity will become an arbiter for many conflicts, creating many models for success for diverse cultures. There is the one life, so to speak, and we are all part of it, nurtured by it, and, in our way, nurturing it.

The awakening of humanity, of current interest and effort, is critical at this juncture. The inner life and the outer life are one, but not when consumed with the pettiness of the moment in the world affairs and between each other. Overcoming conflicts within one's own consciousness, attitudes, and philosophies, is a good beginning. So let us continue to inspire humanity into greatness, into a wondrous future, not only for humanity but for those it embraces, engages with. Namaste.

Origin of human desire to know purpose and destiny

May 12, 2014

JANU: For this morning's discussion, may we present a fact little known to humanity, that on the day of its origin, the moment of its origin, humanity was imprinted with a compulsion to achieve its destiny in service to life. Since its beginning, there has always been profound confusion as to purpose and destiny. The pursuit for these answers is born of that imprint.

Humanity holds itself above the other kingdoms of nature, for it does not recognize or relate to an imprint of this type in any other kingdom. The destiny, or imprint, of survival does not hold the same meaning as what drives humanity to achieve more. 'Just survival' is not enough. One of the purposes of these journeys is to help enlighten humanity as to its destiny beyond survival.

Now, humanity is a species in the physical life. The consciousnesses that inhabit this species are larger than human identity. And those consciousnesses have a greater understanding of humanity's destiny and purpose. Once again, the theme for the awakening of humanity, and that is the purpose of these journeys.

Let us continue, then, our brother, to sing the song of freedom: freedom to be, the freedom to know and understand, and the freedom to co-create.

Thank you, our brother. Namaste.

Human potential and destiny

June 8, 2014

JANU: Humanity's potential and destiny calls it to fulfill what it can be, for humanity and its potential and its destiny are as one reality. How it engages it is subject to its choices. The models it has engaged, built for itself, as an ordered structure for living and progressing, will go through many changes. The concepts of society, organization, religion, philosophy, government, health and well-being, and education will all change. For the current systems of living are limited, primarily from instincts for survival and the cherishing of so-called individuality, privacy, uniqueness, and separation from other elements of life. This will all change, our brother. The challenge for humanity will be the ability to perceive, to see and understand how these changes enhance life, enrich it, and bring greater prosperity, health and well-being, and insight into themselves and the rest of life.

Yes, the paradigm is shifting, as it must, for life is in motion, evolving. And humanity is part of that movement. Humanity will learn to perceive its collective being as a collective being, with a destiny, a future, and a living presence in the larger arena of life. Only in doing so will it see the merit in supporting other species' movement in this direction, and other species who have already achieved it. The obsession with individual survival will give way to appreciation of collective survival and how all contribute to this. So as sojourns begin and end, life continues. Humanity continues and grows into its future because all have existed and contributed. The end of a sojourn is the changing of the form of expression, but the nature of that life continues on, still growing, still evolving, and still contributing. May humanity find peace in this truth of life, and be grateful for their service. Namaste.

The destiny of human communication

JANU: For this morning's journey let us partake of excellence in the arena of destiny.

Now, the destiny we refer to is the destiny of speech, of communication. Humanity's common speech is rife with misrepresentation, ambiguity, falsehood, and limitation. What is coming, our dear brother, is not just telepathy but direct knowing and the ability to perceive the energy fields of each other. This will go a long ways toward communicating with other species on other worlds for a number of them are accomplished in this area. Needless to say, this will completely revolutionize human relationships, behavior, conduct, and integrity.

The transition will be slow at first, with breakthroughs here and there, confusing to many uncertain as to its grasp on reality and reliability. Current speech patterns continue for they are difficult to challenge, decipher, and probe the truthfulness of. But as the new abilities come into being, the advantages will be obvious to those who continue in the old ways. The legal system will change dramatically. Confessionals in churches will, as well. Negotiations between nations and politicians will come to a halt, at first.

This is all part of human awakening, you see, which we bring to point once more. Consider deeply, even before this becomes common, the impacts to come on communication and interactions, relationships, and individual thoughts and behavior. How many people presently endeavor to make their true thoughts and feelings known to those they communicate with? It would be wise to carefully consider this destiny of human communication. Even prayers to whatever deity you choose will be impacted.

There will be schools, so to speak, to guide those slow to enter this new communication and the abilities required, to reduce the conflicts and mistrusts, for there will be divisions in human culture between those who do and those who do not. Much effort will be needed to overcome this rift. Many challenges, our brother, as this changes. Most of human culture will be affected and will change. We do not offer a timeframe, but it is on the horizon and can be explored, even at this time. A good beginning to this is individual assessment of their own truthfulness and clarity of thought and feeling. Namaste.

The Transformed Human

Aug. 5, 2014

JANU: Imagine then, if you will, the nature of the consciousness of one who is truly centered in being at peace, with a love for life, and awakening to all that life is.

This being is powerful in ways that most cannot imagine, for it is a different kind of power. It is eternal power, founded in a love for life. This one makes choices based upon a growing foundation of insight into the nature of everything. This one maintains balance, equilibrium, in all of their faculties. This one has a radiance, a glow, an aura of love and peace. It cannot be denied. This one lives in perfect health, even while incarnate. Male and female have joined as one in this consciousness. This one speaks a little in words, but much in presence. This one is inexhaustible in commitment to life and the encouraging of others to find their truth and their integrity. This one lives without fear and is even-minded in all matters.

What we are speaking of here, our brother, is the destiny of humanity. Gentleness and true strength, love and peace, and a wisdom that understands and communicates with all of life. Namaste, our brother.

An awakening society

Aug. 8, 2014 B

JANU: We are Janu speaking and having at this time a moment of interest in the society that humanity will choose as it awakens further into its destiny. We see a society where humanity will take account of its relationship with other worlds and species, where it will explore new capabilities in each other. Its music will be inspired by these new capabilities and go a long ways towards the power of music to bring harmony to the bodies and the mind, to lift consciousness into new capabilities.

The new society will no longer deprive the female gender of opportunities they are quite capable of. Gender games will fade into the past, no longer relevant.

Enlightenment will diminish the need for a complicated legal system and incarceration.

More nutritional food will be in the offing, to reduce the need for large consumption, leaving the body more relaxed and the digestive system less taxed and more endurable.

Developing a rudder in life to steer by

Aug. 21, 2014

JANU: We are Janu speaking, summoning a measure of the grand design for humanity. And there is a grand design, our brother, not created by humanity per se but by those who incarnate as humanity.

Grand design, then, what does this speak of? It speaks of purpose and ability and creation and manifestation. Not so much the form of it, you see, but the nature of it. Humanity's design includes contributing to life many enlightened qualities. Not limited to species to species exchange, but more in the direction of formation of structures of life to be tapped into, taken advantage of, and manifested in so many different ways due to the cultures of different species, the nature of their consciousness, and the circumstance of their existence. This is where humanity will shine, and already does to a degree, our brother, but much more so in the future, with greater depth and layers of meaning and capability.

Many species emerge on the stage of life without a script, if you will. But the script is written by those who have gone on before and are still writing the script of life to be tapped into and engaged, for life does not leave a new species alone without destiny or a rudder to steer by. These rudders are created by the elements of life that exist, not just in the physical but subtler realms as well, for species exist there as well, you see. So how then does one build a rudder in their life to steer by, to point themselves in the direction of their destiny, their passion to become? Of course, there is experimentation, but life provides a structure, an organization of life, patterns if you will, that can be employed to bear witness to the choices that are made and their outcomes.

So attempt and commit to what motivates you from within, what inspires you, allowing for the developing rudder in your life to steer a new course here and there, with the patience to allow the revelations to bring you understanding. Namaste.

Humanity will choose a new renaissance

Aug. 28, 2014 B

JANU: We would see at this time that the warring forces of your world will continue their aggression and mutual destruction but the effort of service to humanity will see their conflicts more confined to their theater, if you will, for the rest of humanity and its economy will grow stronger and more resilient to forces that would have them get entangled in these. Humanity is growing more weary of the uncertainty of life in the midst of such chaos. Where would wars be if no one attended? And this scenario is growing. Many things in human society have come and gone, due to lack of participation by the growing number who refuse them. So it will be with warring and endless conflicts. Containment and limitation will be the fate of those who choose conflict and mutual destruction.

As these outcomes progress, the hope for the future will blossom and economies and peoples will rally as in a renaissance. Humanity's renaissance is coming because they will choose it. Namaste, our brother.

The patterns of life and destiny

Sept. 16, 2014 B

JANU: We are Janu speaking, holding session, if you will, as we move along the path of awakening of humanity and its destiny. Others observe this journey of humanity as well. It is studied and compared to many others to learn of the nature of the choices humanity makes as it slowly considers its destiny and its shaping of it.

What does 'destiny' mean, then, in the presence of so-called free will and choice and awakening? The patterns of life include destiny, the power to choose, and the freedom to become. But the choices made, and the becoming, are not free of influence, circumstance, existing opportunities, and opportunities that are created. And even so-called time does not govern these, for that is process.

These patterns of life can be observed as probabilities that make up life of so many other beings, consciousnesses, and passions to live. So 'destiny,' our brother, is not set in stone but taken into account as the choices within patterns of life reveal themselves. Free will is the freedom to make choices within the parameters of existence, any existence that consciousness resides in, identifies with, chooses to explore. Everything is connected to everything else, in one way or another. The awakening consciousness begins to appreciate the myriad of realities within the patterns of life, which are without number. And all of this, our brother, is One and every universe, every reality, is of these patterns.

There are subtle 'ring-pass-nots' throughout creation, throughout life, to help maintain the integrity of every pattern of life. For when a consciousness embraces a previously unknown pattern of life, movement takes place in the integrity of that pattern, and nothing is motionless, our brother, or stands still, but evolves and changes. When we say "Life is in motion" the understanding of this has unlimited interpretations of this reality. An interesting balance in perspective to embrace all of this and more, maintaining an evolving sanity of perception and relationship to all of life.

Understanding Destiny

Oct. 22, 2014

JANU: The recognition of a destiny is not a fait accompli of reality. They are goals in life of fulfillment. Fulfillment composed of countless choices, interactions, processes of life, and outcomes beyond number. When one chooses a destiny, or has a destiny, of reaching a mountaintop, the mountaintop does not describe the journey to it. The destiny is a collective of opportunities and choices and experiences. Destinies are similar to belief systems, believing in something that is a high desire and goal for living.

Now, destinies are real in the sense that the capacity for such achievement exists within the being and the life potential that supports it. So the focus of a life, then, day by day, is not so much the destiny as steps taken along the way. And the merit of these steps is demonstrated by the flow of life within the journey, well-being, the growing clarity of thought and vision, the relationships, not just with people, that at times have sense and feeling of purpose in the face of what's been accomplished thus far.

Humanity has a destiny that includes awakening as a significant choice and step on the path into its destiny, its potential. So, from a point of view, destiny is part of choices made, realizations accrued, and the legacy of living. We do not suggest to you that destinies are the end of the reason for living, for there are potential destinies beyond. Even as awakening is being achieved, there is always more to come.

So, you see, destiny is constructed or built daily. And yes, there are destinies within destinies within destinies. They are part of understanding life. The Earth, your universe, humanity, is not the beginning of this but a continuation of it. Life has always been, our brother, and will always be, in one reality or another. Destinies are thresholds of achievement and they continue, as do awakenings. To understand humanity and its destiny, become aware of, become conscious of so much more of life than the Earth experience and your life becomes richer and richer and more wondrous and satisfying.

JANU: We are agreeing once more to embrace more of the Truth of Life. For this morning's journey, let us pursue the interest in that which belongs to so-called destiny.

What is destiny, then, but the capacity to live and create and to be? So destiny is not the destination in the limited sense, but the whole path of living, experiencing, creating, manifesting, and serving life. Loving is part of destiny, but love with vast understanding in meaning. Even when coupling in incarnate life, the passion for each other evolves and deepens into a larger reality than just the partner, you see.

Destiny is potential fulfilled and the creation of new potential. So destiny is better understood when seen as a moment to moment reality. Grow in your awareness of your growing potential as a being of consciousness and intimacy with your becoming. There is no stopping point, for life moves on, as does your destiny. Your destiny, our brother, is not separate from the rest of life. They are one, with mutual benefit every moment.

Understanding the nature of your destiny and its evolution reveals purpose and meaning and even that is changing. Observing another in their life is limited by recognizing a trait or pattern and defining them by it, for even that is changing. Understand, your life is a path of destiny that cannot be defined by one moment of it. Everything is flowing and in motion, changing and growing, evolving, embracing a new expression of oneness and of being. The more you understand your own life, the more you appreciate the uniqueness of another and their destiny.

Endeavor to be at peace as a foundation for accepting and embracing all your destiny can be and the changes that occur in others, whether they understand them or not. You are the Truth of Life. Live it as well as you may. Allow happiness and joy to find you, live within you, and encourage you to continue. Namaste.

A larger understanding of humanity

June 5, 2015

JANU: Reaching then into the flow of life called humanity, we would convey an understanding that humanity as such has a long history and the current human experiment in life is not the first. And there will be others to come. Much planning and building and service to the human journey on the Earth has occurred. The source of human existence and therefore the reason it will continue is from the architects of life of which humanity is a part.

A lengthy and strong tradition of life is humanity's background. It has overcome many obstacles and crises and thresholds of achievement long forgotten. And in every instance, humanity has demonstrated its mettle and this is part of the reason the architects of humanity are committed to its survival and its evolution. Its service to life has always existed and will reach new thresholds in times to come. As humanity awakens, the understanding opens and the command of its faculties, its capabilities, will bring much into play. The current unrest and warring, conflicts and struggles, are a small part of human history, and even a smaller part of its future.

And as humanity of the Earth discovers and connects with humanity of other worlds, this network of life will become more profound in the flow of life. Humanity has demonstrated it is a survivor with capabilities yet to be realized. Base not your bonding to human destiny, and the destiny of those who incarnate, the beings of Light, the eternal natures, on only one sojourn. Understand the larger reality of humanity and, through that, the larger Family of Life. Many are involved with human destiny that are not human. The Family of Life is vast, diverse, and in motion.

Think in an unlimited way. Live in an unlimited way. Understand in an unlimited way. And be unlimited. Namaste.

Shared destinies

Sept. 26, 2015

JANU: The change that is coming to humanity, which we all welcome, is to be aware of, to some degree, the larger life, and human consciousness moving in the direction of a respect for life and the realization that its potential is affected by its choices. Wondering about a better life slowly giving way to knowing what potentials exist. Humanity is not the first to create a better life. We are all in existence to benefit each other, to earn and own our achievements and to share them. There are others who have achieved some of what humanity dreams of, hopes for. Just as every part of your physical body benefits from the rest, the destiny of humanity can include the destiny of others.

How does one, then, share their destiny with another's destiny? By becoming conscious of each other, open to the larger life and to walk that path. Loving life or any part of it brings it to you and you to it. Sharing destinies also includes your communities, your neighbors, your friends. Place your attention upon the larger life, and by this we mean life larger than you. Have a sharing consciousness. Grow more sensitive to life's impressions, patterns, energies. Inspirations have many sources and you are one of them, to another.

Life is more connected than you realize. Isolation is an illusion. Uniqueness and universality co-exist. The fear of losing uniqueness is not well founded, especially when consciousness matures, evolves, to being a part of, one with, collective life. There is benefit in pursuing your goals, your dreams, with the vaster resource and wisdom of the larger life. You still pick and choose which portions of this wisdom and experience to take advantage of. And when you do, your endeavors enrich these sources. They are blessed by your application of their achievements. Individual uniqueness is not lost in cooperation with, collaboration with others, but all benefit.

Share your destiny with that of another in an open and free way, requiring nothing of each other. Do so in harmony with life, openly and freely, as you stand in your integrity and enjoy living. Namaste.

Signs of a brighter future

Oct. 20, 2015 B

JANU: We are looking forward to the excursion into life that awaits so much of humanity. Understanding that this is process, but what seems like a long time to humanity is but a moment in a larger reality.

Many signposts, so to speak, along the way, markers if you will. A growing presence of insights, individually and collectively, into better decision-making and innate understanding of personal and collective motivations. Another marker: a growing sensitivity to the needs of others, not in big ways, as you might call them, but in small ways. A growing sensitivity to health of the body, clarity of the mind, and heartfelt emotions. Sensitivity to energies, creating them, manipulating them, including those of nature and animals. A foundation-building of communication beyond words, with every part of life and nature. A form of telepathy here and there, improving with time and proving to be accurate. A growing ability to understand the causes of suffering and illness. The ability to see inside the body of another, identifying the pathology. The ability to feel color and project it. And yes, even the ability to transmute materials. A greater ability to be in focus and find peace. The ability to call upon the power within.

Many such qualities are in store for humanity, in balance and harmony with the life around you. Guided by the wisdom from within, a bright future for humanity, growing brighter with time. There will be struggles to let go of old ways that have imprisoned, so to speak, humanity. That is all changing, our brother. It is natural to let go of the old when the vision arrives for the new. Look forward to a bright future. It begins today. Namaste.

A look at the next century

Oct. 27, 2015

JANU: Moving into the next century of human achievement, let us consider several possibilities.

Avoiding disease through understanding of the entire being is on the horizon.

Human relationship with the Earth as two living consciousnesses will change critically humanity's view of Earth as a resource, a consumable.

Enlightened reincarnation will change everything, eventually leading to manifestation of the human body at any stage of maturity.

So much of the human journey includes repetition of that learned before, but conscious awareness of the systems of the Earth will lead to forewarning of changes to be managed.

We are not speaking here of isolated individuals or groups moving in this direction but populations.

First contact with another world, publicly, is a slight possibility, as public human thought and consciousness moves beyond the Earth into larger realities.

More and more of humanity's achievements in enlightened living will be inspired by these achievements with other species of other worlds, but this is a ways off yet.

Large differences in social and economic conditions still prevail.

The arts will suffer for a while due to a rebellion against change, but eventually flourish as a result of awakening consciousnesses not only to the beauty of life but as a way of life.

Humanity's future is still larger than its past. In the scope of its destiny, it is just begun. Namaste.
