

Life on Other Worlds & Beyond

This is a combination of various series of journeys over the years, some but not all involving actual interaction with beings of these other worlds. Much of the process was experiential in nature and thus not reflected in the spoken words.

The reader may note that there is frequent comment about re-visiting with a particular culture, which did not occur. This is a reflection of the vagaries of the physical existence here on Earth and the many areas of interest for exploration.

It is hoped that these journeys will serve as an example of what exists in the Larger Life and what sorts of adventures are available to those who desire to do the attuning and exploring. May you enjoy the reading and your own further explorations.

Exploring cultures that can help us understand and expand our own Jan. 27, 1997

JANU: This is an excellent subject of exploration as you have outlined this morning. Might we begin in this way of exploration in understanding of the cultures and the lives of others in other worlds, as you put it. Not limited to that of course but a good beginning place, you see.

We know of one such world that you might find interesting. It is known to us as Dorean in the Ursa Major sector of your star charts, if you will. It is a world benighted with conglomerations of understandings and cultures that has struggled for synergism and is emerging from a dark period. Even the concept of "light," as you will, is a concept there still. This world lives in darkness much of the time and exhibits tendencies to reconstruct itself, by this we mean the cultures, in the semblance of old patterns, if you will. The magic here, for any culture, you see dear one, is the embrace of a new idea, a new understanding. What does one culture repattern or reconstruct itself on, if not what it has known? So, you see, your query, your quest in this direction is a valid one. To open the rebuilding of a culture and an understanding in new ways, with new references for repatterning, you see.

You will have the opportunity, should you choose, dear one, to provide service to this world as you explore new possibilities and understandings for cultural reconstruction in this quest you have chosen. For they would welcome such contact and exchange. The Doreans have a malleable constitution in perception and in thought process, willing to hear but for a moment to illustrate this point, if you will.

And now move on to another, in the same region, a world known by the name Volereahn. A much older world in terms of cultural development. Societal existence dominates primarily the waters and the air, not so much the land here, you see. These cultures have bridged a range of possibilities that existed for them for some time yet, not discovered immediately. These possibilities include the transition or migration, if you will, across densities within a limited range, allowing for movement from location to location without the need for conveyance. Shared understanding at distance, without the need for transmission and reception devices, you see. Mutation of species or conditions, even within themselves, for desired effect, you see. And the ongoingness of life without the need for sustenance as you understand it. If you traveled to this world in your current physical condition, many of these would be invisible to you. The world would seem almost deserted. But now and again you would see the coming and going of their image as if appearing and disappearing, you see.

This world we speak of is in an elliptical orbit that brings it in close proximity to the influence of another world, causing much modification or stress in the energy fields and forces within the planet. This has contributed to their experimentations with manipulations of energies. They have considered making a leap, so to speak, to this near passer-by. Have yet to accomplish this, though. An interesting challenge in possibility for them.

What we speak of here, as object lesson, is that the manner and shape of the possibilities of a culture are without limit and are a mixture of the fortune of opportunity and circum-stance embraced by a consciousness open to possibilities and experimentation. Look at your Earth, if you will. Are there possibilities of circumstance and arrangements of your world's realities, seen and unseen, proximities to celestial realities, forces that are available, yet untapped, yet still there, you see? Discoveries of even one individual untapped, unexplored by the society at large?

These are some of the many possibilities of this course of exploration, dear one. And, of course, this is but one of endless courses of exploration we would be glad to journey with you on. Let us continue with these journeys for the purpose of opening minds to new possibilities. We are the Brotherhood of Light, honoring your quest and bringing to your awareness the truth of life. Namaste.

A balanced approach to exploring other cultures

January 28, 1997

JANU: This does open up the possibilities somewhat for exploration, for your world has experienced the cultures of those with understanding and demonstration in those areas yet realized by your current society, you see. There have been pockets of culture or civilization not large enough to be recognized as a nation or a country that have exhibited profound or transcendent relationship and understanding. These pockets are scattered around the world. Some exist today. many have long since disappeared, you see. And, yes, there have been those who have come and gone to your world, moving on to other adventures, multi-dimensionally speaking. There have been those called world shapers or world planners that introduce new possibilities of understanding or redirect or shape the direction of understanding in existing cultures, you see. There are many of those in your society today that if they possessed this ability to move about and influence would spin, so to speak, and overwhelm the culture, to where it would lose its bearing, its identity, and ultimately its will to stand as co-creator with life. Much to be learned from this enlightened approach to assisting others when dealing with other cultures in your world at this time, one to another.

Let us examine, then, this range of possibilities, for the benefits of awareness of the realities of other cultures of other worlds have already been visited upon you, some in ways you may never realize their origins. Others, suspicions grow that this is so, among your researchers.

How, then, do you offer a new possibility to another? Examine this carefully. Do you do it honoring and understanding their nature and their path to their current experience? Or do you do it only from the conviction of your own? Do you monitor carefully that your method and your suggestion bears fruit in harmony with the soul desires and patterns of those you would assist, according to their timetable and not yours? Do you encourage in such a way that they will grow to eventually understand and embrace you and others with understanding, self-assuredness, and ownership of their being in truth as free beings? Examine your motivation to assist another and grow in sensitivity and awareness to the motivations you would welcome in those other cultures that might assist you.

One advantage of this other world/other culture examination is to assist in the long or larger view of possibilities and outcomes. For we speak here of the lifetime of worlds and many cultures and not the advantage of one over another, you see. The flow of life, has many tributaries and many directions and is in constant change. And these tributaries are all connected in some way. One stream leads to another and another and another. When you connect with the life of another world's culture, do you not connect with their connections, as well? And, of course, they connect with you, too, and your understandings. As you would gain from another culture's path and experience, with the same joy and enthusiasm, are you equally as eager to be a blessing for them as well? And as our dear brother Ramtha has said, "Each are givers and blessed in the giving."

This approach this morning is for the purpose of laying the foundation for the exploration and embrace of these realities for successful outcome. When you reach for the life understanding of another, do you reach to receive only or to give? Let that be your conviction and your declaration at the onset, you see. And do this with your neighbor as well. To take only, spirals downward and withdraws in on itself. When mutual assistance takes place, it expands and grows, with endless possibilities. So connect with life in this way, dear one, when you reach for the stars, when you reach for the truth of your being, and when you connect with your neighbor.

Let us proceed in this manner in these future journeys and we will expand into limitless possibilities. This is a good beginning and foundation. Namaste.

Building a network exchange with other worlds

February 12, 1998 B

JANU: Let us, this afternoon, examine the realm of possibilities for your world. These possibilities come on the heels of recent changes in the structure or design for the parameters of existence. These possibilities include or range from, communication between worlds bringing direct exchange of philosophies, technologies, science, traditions, and history to transplantation of species.

Consider the possibilities, living in a world that operates on a interplanetary, intersystemic, and intergalactic basis. Networks of cooperation and transfer of energies and understanding, even commerce, will change the base perceptions and consciousness of your entire world. You marvel at global markets. Consider these implications. The need for philosophical and technological and sociological development evolving exclusive with one world for its ongoingness no longer will be the case. The community of the network will grow in orders of magnitude, drawing upon the talents of many worlds.

This scenario already exists in other systems of life but this scenario is in the offing for your future. The discussions to date prepare you for this. Yes, even in your researches through these attunements, consider this perspective of networking for your research and your preparation. Become known on other worlds, and they of you, dear one. Establish rapports and bases of understanding. Each world has much to offer and much to gain. The understanding exchange alone would revolutionize your world. And this is possible even at this time, through this attunement process.

Begin constructing, diagrammatically, a grid network of your neighbors. Identify, by location, contact and nature. Let this be another of your current pursuits for investigation and development. The multi-dimensional hierarchy or networking is still valid to pursue, dear one. But do not overlook the networking of worlds and, of course, each with their hierarchies and multi-dimensional attributes. Much to consider here on this scale of expansion in understanding and relationships. Let this be part of your consideration at this time of embarking upon these many opportunities. Namaste.

Kree To of the planet Druma

February 13, 1998 A

JANU: This journey of exploration into the understanding of and exchange with other worlds, is a platform for future investigations and discoveries, made in synchronicity or cooperation with groups embarking upon missions of common interest. Your journeys, then you see, can and will be as team efforts.

Let us turn our attention this morning to our first encounter with a world known as Druma, in the Picarus sector of the star in the Crab Nebula. This star has a number of worlds, each of which bears some semblance of life. This star is known by the inhabitants of the world we shall visit today as Domal. The individual we will meet today will be known as Kree To (pronounced toe), two words here. Kree To is representative of a council of explorers responsible for this world's thrust into galactic concerns.

JR: Welcome and greetings, my brother Kree To. Thank you for responding this morning.

KREE TO: You are welcome, my brother. We welcome this opportunity. Yes, this is Cree To speaking through this entourage of yours, so beautifully prepared for this encounter, making quite smooth the transition into communication.

Our world is known to us as has been stated. It is a rather small world by some standards. Its rotational axis is parallel to that of our sun. We do have the capability of what you call space travel, although we are experimenting with non-vehicular transport, a technology which we have discovered from another culture. We have three moons in close proximity, creating a complex of influences on our world. We understand you have only one, which simplifies things to large degree. Although our moons are quite small, they still have impact or influence. Only one of our moons is suitable for small expeditions and a platform for research. It is called Loda.

Your connection with us at this time is noted with the council and arrangements will be made for future exchanges. We are the council of technology and information exchange so, you see, your connection is appropriate. We have much interest in what we understand to be the experimental nature of your world's life forms and cultures. We will be glad to share with you our understandings, as well.

Our appearance is somewhat spherical, compared to yours, which to us appears as tall and slender or elongated. We move about with a floating capacity, not using appendages for locomotion. We do have the ability to suspend, although to not too great heights. Our nature is a little less dense than yours, making this possible. We have an ordered society, and our individual existence extends to approximately three hundred of your solar cycles. We communicate through direct contact, what would appear to you as a bumping into one another. there is widespread interest in our population in engaging other worlds and other understandings. This is widespread. We have made contacts such as this, and in this manner, for a long time.

Our physical make up is not gaseous but not your density either. Somewhere in between. We are privileged, during this communication, to receive impressions of your world even as we speak. Most interesting. We have a historical record of being in another life form, existing on a different world in our distant past. The transition to this form necessitated a different world climate or condition to support the life.

There are others on the council who would like to enter into this communication as future connections are made.

JR: My brother Kree To, please extend my warm invitation to their involvement.

KREE TO: Thank you, my brother. This will be done. And now, let us conclude this opportunity at this time, looking forward to many such. A grand adventure for us as well, our brother. And as we communicate dismissal in our understanding: kal lecta do.

JANU: So you see, this avenue of exploration has many possibilities and many wonderful beings to add to your understanding and experience. We will continue with this at another time. Namaste.

The Blue-White being of the Universe of Light

March 13, 1998 A

JANU: We have acquired, as you have heard, the permits necessary to proceed with this exploration this morning. Much preparation has been required and made to proceed and now we start our journey.

We would ask you to condense yourself into an intense region of life for the purpose of this transportation, as it were. We will give you a moment to accomplish this....The size isn't the significant factor here, it's the density of your light and intensity of it. It will be needed to penetrate that which transcends the great distances of time and space. Yes, that's it. Moving closer now....For you see, there are natural barriers for controlling realities that keep in place the dynamics and the parameters of specific realities. Our journey today passes through one of these barriers and this is how it is accomplished. We are nearing that needed to proceed....Almost there....Now, let us journey to another reality, another time space, another aspect of your universe that you will never know exploring only your own aspect. We will arrive in a moment. It is not so much time as matching or agreeing with the process for transitting the barrier. The return journey will be carefully engaged as well, dear one.

The light intensity you have achieved matches the light intensity of the barrier and that which lies beyond. What you have emerged into is a universe aspect where the intensity of light is such that your perception of darkness or void is not a reality. To perceive clusters of life and world realities, your vision must be adjusted to, or biased if you will, on this level of intensity. That's it.

Now, what you are perceiving is light patterns of collective and individual consciousness that are more confined spectrum intensities within the larger spectrum of the surrounding light--the light fields. There is one who is approaching, previously arranged through this process and communication, to welcome you to their reality. We use the term "his/her" presence, for gender has no reality here. Expands gradually into yours for this being is a being in consciousness and light. This being's identification is through pattern. Although this being can shift pattern in an unlimited number of configurations, there is a core pattern that initiates these. And the core pattern is the identity. For the purposes of our visit and revisit, the pattern shown for this one is as you can see. An intensity of blue-white light with a geometric configuration of a geodesic sphere with each plane radiating a ray of light. This will be a recognition symbol or pattern.

You appear to this one in a less firm way, due to your temporary engagement of this one's reality. Extending your greetings will be registered and understood.

JR: Greetings, friend in the Light known by blue-white light and core pattern. May we begin to know each other and exchange understanding.

BLUE-WHITE BEING: Yes, we may. And let me understand this possibility and process that has been initiated by the one who precedes you and makes arrangements. You will be known to us as Visitor Without Form, form as we understand it and live it. So, you are the formless visitor.

We would share our life, understanding, as you have agreed to, in a way we understand unconventional to your patterns of experience and exchange. Our pattern recognition and communication medium is in the form of light transmissions, arranged by precise and many varied configurations of our presence or consciousness in our reality. These many complex structures of light convey rich, instantaneous understanding.

Our survival, which is a strange word to us, coming from your vocabulary and understanding, is a function of the field of light in which we live. Where you seem to experience platforms for life you call worlds, our platform for life is life itself. We perceive no spaces, if you will, from platform to platform as do you. Therefore, we find no boundaries or limits to our communication with and experiencing of all of life. Our light field makes this possible. Only by communication with beings as yourself, do we appreciate the difference.

Our numbers exist as a continuous movement of core pattern shifts, depending upon the range, or we should say, the aspect of the range of life we choose to identify as. For in our transitions, we choose our becoming and do not find barriers between your so-called dimensions for communication and existence. Our elements of reality are available to all of us at all times, although we do, and must, make changes in our core pattern to achieve this. From your time space perception of position and distance, our reality exists in a way not easily described by your measurements. We co-penetrate with your light but not with your time space. This possibility we find not described in your understanding. Our ongoingness is measured by the ongoingness of our field of light, not by your rotational periods of your platforms of life. In time, I will share our journey through core pattern shifts to other elements of our range of reality with you so you can understand how this is done.

Needless to say, this communication is made possible only through much preparation and arrangements by a number of what you would call professionals in this art. On first glance at your universe, I have yet to determine a need or desire to explore it, for, from our point of view, it is too confining. However, I trust our communications will reveal merits worth exploring possibly sufficiently through you. We conclude at this time this introduction to our life. And welcome the opportunity to be introduced to yours.

We conclude at this time and withdraw the connection with gratitude for those who make such arrangement. Until we connect again.

JR: Thank you, friend in the light of your universe. I have enjoyed beginning to know you. Namaste.

JANU: We will retrace our steps, so to speak, in a deliberate manner, returning to the integrity of your current reality or platform of life, as our acquaintance has perceived. We now approach the barrier and begin the process of transiting, honoring its integrity and purpose. And now returning once more to more conventional configuration, relaxing this intensity of light to the threshold of your current existence.

Laveeta introduces his world and his people, the Lofta

March 16, 1998 A

JANU: Kicking off, if you will, this afternoon's journey in the direction of a star system or cluster for the purpose of broadening your base of familiarity with, and familiarity by, other parts of life.

Now then, for this journey we must engage it in such a way as to bring harmony to the vehicle for the connecting up with, the interface, you see. We will accomplish this in short manner by duplicating their pattern within your own. Now then, this pattern of recognition and connection will be in the form of that which represents high achievement to them, you see. This resembles a shroud of light that is their state of pure being.

Now then, let us proceed with this straight away as they are awaiting our arrival....Yes, as you can see, these beings have a shimmer about them, which is the emergence of their higher consciousness, as seen through their vehicles, you see. Be it known to you that you are on a similar path, and therefore able to create that interface, although they understand it somewhat differently.

Their vehicles of transportation do not touch the ground, as do yours. They operate at various fixed heights which aids in organized travel. Their world has lofty structures of varying configurations, generally not uniform in shape, with many rounded and overhanging configurations at a variety of angles and elevations.

You are now being noticed by them in your current light pattern and their representative draws near at this time. He is inviting you to descend from your present position and enter their city, if you will, even though you do not receive his communication as yet. Now you can perceive his communication, as adjustments have been made for this and let us proceed with dialogue.

LAVEETA: Welcome, stranger, to our midst. We are the Lofta and we greet you at this time, this day, in our world and have been summoned to engage you in a taste of our reality. I am one known as Laveeta, and am positioned in our culture as liaison for new arrivals. Your arrival, you see, is not precisely configured for our primary function, however can be accommodated. We will proceed at this time to a location on the far side of the city from our present location, that you may enjoy a view somewhat representative of our style of life. Now then, we attach ourselves to our modes of transportation and, for the most part, the course of travel is straight to our destination. We enjoy a technology base that gives us many advantages over our ancient predecessors. These are in the form of hovering transportation controlled environment, extended life spans--would appear indefinite to you, a very ordered society.

We are now arriving at our destination and, as you can see, it is to you breathtaking but to us a unifying influence. What we have shown you is the outer frontier or boundary of our domain or world, revealing the vastness of the universe. For now you understand that we live in an artificial environment suspended in space even at a controlled distance from our sun. We prefer living with our city facing away much of the time. Our low gravity field allows for the wispiness appearance of our buildings and our elevated or off-surface transportation.

Our existence would be somewhat of a strain for you as it requires a unification of, or unity of, our being that is aligned to that which maintains our constructed environment. We exist far beyond your galaxy in a little known quadrant of ours. We function with purpose in life that speaks of achieving independence from form. We can see in you that the world of your current residence would find this unappealing and lacking in random playfulness. Your style of life would be seen by us as without control and somewhat reckless.

You ask of our neighbors and interaction with other life forms or worlds or cultures. This has changed greatly and now what appeared to you as isolated. We are an experiment, although of such long standing that we no longer see it as optional, in achieving a new form of life, or should we say, life reality without form. We feel we are close to achieving this and we have a lightness of being and fulfillment that your current shroud of light cannot see. This could change in time but would require you to make significant changes in your configuration. We would have you know that we are well along the path of this experiment. And it is called such, as others have journeyed towards this goal in different ways.

Now then, we will conclude at this time, having begun our exchange. We would have you know of us for your consideration in a possible future. We are losing connection now and bid you return. Thank you, brother, for this opportunity and I wish you success.

JANU: So you see, the range of these experiences knows no limits. Life is diverse and unusual as imagination permits. These beings wrap themselves in their life quest and they will achieve it in their way. But you can also see and experience through this journey that their way is not for everyone. But honor theirs, for their commitment is as complete as any other. Namaste, until we journey again.

Reekah "of the wise" of the planet Demarrah

April 10, 1998 A

JANU: This morning's excursion is an exercise in adaptability for, you must understand, there are many worlds so unlike your own in form, in protocol, and in culture as to render them almost unrecognizable as worlds in their own right, from your Earth's perspective. Yet, worlds they are, rich in tradition, understanding, and embrace of life. This morning's journey is to engage such a world. Let us begin at this time, making such preparation. And, yes, this world is aware of our imminent arrival.

Now then, what needs to be accomplished in preparation is the reduction or diminishing of your scale of size in relation to your known universe, your world, and your surroundings. For the world we will soon arrive at, your perception and awareness of each other will be hidden by extreme difference in your size. That's it. Make this transition. Even approaching the microscopic level. This is how we shall proceed.

Now then, where do we find such a world? Understand this, dear one, what we approach here is not a planet of this size or scale but a culture and species of this scale. The world is not unlike your own in physical stature. But the beings of consciousness of this world, on this world, are as we have prepared. We make the journey at this time.

The planet we have arrived at is referred to as Demarrah by those who inhabit it. Now you would think this species of beings might be unaware of their worlds' true nature and the nature of the universe. But this is not the case, for physical size does not describe the content of consciousness. The representative for this encounter will greet you in a moment, allowing you time to adjust to their reality. The mean temperature on this world is -27 degrees Celsius. Quite cold, by your standards. As you can see, these people, these beings, are quite small, and exist physically in an oval shell that can be opened for presentation of their persona and for communication. Their physical appearance or structure makes possible survival in their environment, which they do not perceive as harsh.

Now then, let us be greeted by and accepted by their liaison. You must reduce your size even further. That's better. Now you are on a par and this show of respect is well received. The one who greets you is referred to as Reekah, translated "of the wise." Knowledge of his world, that he would convey, is one of little change in temperature, little or no atmospheric pressure, and low mass compared to yours. Where you have large oceans of water they have large areas devoid of vegetation or other such organics. They have a symbiotic life with the basic silicate structure or composition of their world. Their physicality has piezoelectric properties, not unlike their world's basic materials. This is their medium for communication, through electric fields, and therefore have no audible vocabulary as you have witnessed. They do not measure time in years, as do you, so their perception of the age of their species and their world is marked by events and their sense of the change in electrical properties of their world over time. They draw their sustenance directly from the planet. Their enhancement of their existence in part is by networking and building electric fields of energy exchange for research, exploration, and examination of natural phenomenon.

Observing their electric fields is far more revealing of their inner nature. Physically, they appear as inert ovoids of silica. The opening in Reekah's shell was not physical but energetic, to greet you. Communication with these beings requires some translation of electric field variations to understanding from your point of reference or familiarity. They find surprising and interesting your sense of gaiety and lightness. Notice how the transmissions are received by them and communicated instantly from one to another across their network.

This should be sufficient for holding this focus at this time. We will slowly withdraw.

JR: Thank you, Reekah, for your consideration and openness for exchange of understanding. I would like to return at another time, if you agree.

JANU: And he does, my brother, in his way of understanding and communication. You have been well received and they find no threat in you, or discord. So you are welcome to return. Let us return now to your world of origin and slowly readjust to normal perception of size. Ah, that's it. This journey being quite unlike the others will take some getting used to. As you acclimate better to their environment and nature, perception of their world will increase. We thank you at this time for the opportunity to explore. Namaste.

Dora of Eltera 3 in the Sobin sector

May 12, 1998

JANU: Let us proceed straight away with this journey continuation, as you put it. Your chosen destination being Eltera 3 in the Sobin Sector. Now, your liaison or connection last night was through your impression of a pink presence and pattern, to become one with for entrance into this world's reality.

Let us now begin the adjustment process and the necessary arrangements, both here and there, for connection. Focus at this time upon the motive for exploration with this particular world and build that into your pattern. ... We now have arrived at the threshold for recognition and engagement.

At this time, the one who greets you is as you have seen, dressed in white with tan skin, small round white headdress, and remembers your encounter yesterday and your marvel at the beauty of their world. You must leave behind any abrasive patterns of human experience to engage this world. This one's name is Dora for recognition. He is of wise counsel and thoroughly knowledgeable on his domain. He now invites you to travel with him.

JR: Greetings, Dora. Thank you for allowing this journey. May our encounter, one with each other, benefit our understanding and relationship. Please proceed.

DORA: This journey then proceeds. As you can see, this world of ours is more etherial than yours. We do not rely upon fixed forms or natures of matter as do you. Our existence is freer to accommodate and support our interests. It also speaks of the nature of our relationships with each other. Our ongoingness is perpetuated solely by our interest to do so and does not rely upon support systems as does your world. We are in a continual state of creating. Our forms or vehicles can appear as that which resembles a visitor such as yourself or no form at all. My presence to you was for your acceptance. We therefore have no life pattern need of accumulation of material wealth or objects, for we create what we need to experience, to explore, to communicate, as we go. When one who is this free, moment to moment, one does not need accumulation to guard against deficiency. Your world, in time, may move in this direction of living reality, possibly not to this degree, which will change dramatically the face of life you see around you at this time in your sojourn.

I am the only presence you're aware of at this moment for the others have not chosen to adopt a form for recognition at this time. They are satisfied with observing our connection for the time being. But make no mistake, they are here.

To explore our world as a continuum of experience, one must enter to a degree into the nature of our flow of creating. Yes, allow yourself this and when you are ready, we will proceed. We will journey at this time to the degree that your adjustment allows.

As you can observe, we have the capacity to alter our reality of being to where our world appears as and interacts as etherial right through its center, therefore allowing passage and exploration. We move--and this is not the best word here--by means of creating through intention, by changing relationship with our current location. Current location being transmitted or moved through the field of created relationship that is our domain. So we create, in a sense, movement as reality rather than a material relative relationship change, as do you. You move through your environment. We create the environment of movement. That is the difference. This form of movement allows us to experience each other's creations somewhat as if they were our own individual creations. So, in a sense, we travel from and through creations, to and through creations, patterns of experience.

From your point of view it is true, we are centered more with identity in thought than in form. And yes, we can create pure thought experience, for which there is no form as such, from your point of view. If you would like to experiment with this creative process, you may do so. The only protocol we would suggest would be temporary but harmonious creation. Now then, fixate your attention on an experience or quality. Yes, we see it with you. The thought reality of a network for connection with and exchange of understanding with others of our world. This can be done.

You bring much amusement to the experience of others of us through this connection. They are delighted, as you can see, with what you bring from your experience reference. They delight in the joys of your world and perceive minimally the troubles in your world, for it is foreign to their experience completely. So, allow them their joy without concern. They do see and take from this communication an interest in new creations, to experience for themselves within their reality their norms of life.

We will withdraw from this opportunity at this time, closing down this network and trust you have benefited from the experience.

JR: I have, my brother Dora. And welcome further opportunities. Thank you for your patience and assistance. I wish you and your people every joy. Until we meet again. Namaste.

Noan speaks on the nature of his domain

July 30, 1998 A

JANU: We have engaged this opportunity at this time as you have requested, an opportunity similar to the previous ones in this series. The other world we have in mind for this journey speaks more of the sustaining of the integrity of life through discourse, in the sense of pattern regeneration. This life reality of which we speak and will visit today maintains itself through pattern regeneration, which is its medium of sharing life collectively, maintaining a synergism not only among its collective, but with the Orders of Life as well. We are mounting at this time a journey to this reality and there will be a contingent joining us today who will communicate upon arrival.

So, now then, let us prepare and journey into this understanding. We begin now and, as we proceed, a little guidance for engagement. We would have you at this time cut loose, so to speak, of any ties that would require this experience to fit any norms of your world. That is correct. The entourage that joins us is already so prepared. This region of your universe is little known by your scientists and exists near a star cluster formed in a wedge shaped pattern oriented behind another galaxy, other than yours. This location has the property of absorbing, through attraction, the patterns of life that exhibit or reflect their origins. For your consciousness to enter into this reality, you must allow this journey, you must perform this journey within the integrity and, to this influence, the transparency of your true being. So you enter this reality unaffected by its attraction to other patterns, maintaining your true center at all times.

Now then, being so prepared as we are at this moment, we journey into this reality. As you have observed, form disappears. But the field of expression is continuous. Your counterpart, or shall we say contact, in this reality chooses the name "Noan" (no-ahn). He has selected--he being an arbitrary term--this one has selected this name to symbolize, for communication, a pattern of the moment. Noan will communicate with you at this time.

JR: Greetings, Noan. Thank you for this opportunity.

NOAN: This communication opportunity, as you call it, will take some getting used to. We do not communicate in this manner at all, although we have observed and absorbed patterns at or from other sources or origins that exhibit such communication. So we are not completely inexperienced in this area. You would be amazed, if not surprised or delighted, at the diversity of communication throughout the universe. Our existence brings to us experience of these many realities. We have no form as such and your entourage has prepared you to a degree for this experience. However, there is much yet to be accommodated. But this so-called transparency of your nature deals primarily with the release of form, but does not complete adaptation needed to explore fully this reality. Noan is the name I have chosen. It is a pattern that interfaces or accommodates your own that you travel with at this moment.

Now then, what of our reality to interest you at this time. We exist, and even the understanding of the pattern "we" does not apply as it does in your world, for we exist more as a many-faceted organized reality, where an element of which communicates with you at this time. But we exist primarily to explore, simply put, and what we explore are the renderings, the transmissions, the emanations of the patterns of life. To do so, we must absorb into our collective a wide range of reality.

We are constructing, or arranging, for you at this time a small glimpse as we perceive life. That is it. Allow yourself to expand into our awareness as your so-called transparent centering. And now you see that we exist on what are called the currents of life, each current being a movement of life through us. These patterns of life construct us and this is how we expand our beingness and reconstruct ourselves. Your pattern flow is on hold at the moment, for the purpose of this journey. And wisely so, for not to do so, you would be absorbed into the collective.

To call this a world, in your sense of such, is not accurate. It is more of a domain within a reality. We will attempt this again at another time, should you choose to do so. Now then, we suggest a return to your frame of reference, while the integrity of your current state remains intact.

JR: Thank you, Noan, for this opportunity to understand and share a moment.

JANU: Yes, we have begun the process of return. We will discuss, in due course, the significance of this journey and this reality, but for the moment retain and record the experience of the transition in attunement configuration and a beginning experience of the nature of this reality. You see how this allows you the freedom to observe your own presence, your own emanations, from a different perspective. Yes, we are through with this. Namaste.

Companion of the domain called Spree

November 13, 1998 A

JANU: We do have opportunity before us this morning to continue with this series you have described, networking with other worlds. And this time one not so distant from your location as previously explored worlds have been. This one assumes the position directly north of your world at this time in your solar cycle. It is a world that journeys through what you call the dimensions or vibrational octaves. Not the best terminology here. So its experience and wisdom is culled from exposure to many realities. It is, at this time, nearest your North Star in direction and will remain in its particular vibrational configuration for two more of your Earth days. We have liaison contact with this world but you must understand that its reality does not conform to your current understanding of planetary-solar configuration and their dependency one upon another.

Now, for us to make contact with this world we must engage in a bit of dodging, manipulation through the vibrational structures or orders of life. This will take approximately seven minutes of your time to complete the preparation. Let us begin straight away with this journey.

Now, to begin with, focus your consciousness, your being, in such a way as to make collective frequency shifting for your entire being, able to be accomplished quickly and non-linearly. That is exactly right. You condense or minimize the reality of your being, your conscious awareness to that approaching a singularity, but not that far, you see.

Now, let us begin the shifting. We will pass through seven layers of density.... Dwelling upon the third for a moment.... And then continuing.... We now accomplish a polarity reversal on the fifth. Yes, it is more like that of a negative/positive film change in your photography media. Moving on now. Becoming as a mirror reality of your Earth configuration, so that the impressions of this world are reflection rather than direct contact. This protects you and your integrity in your current environment and does not disturb theirs as well.... We are in the sixth level, moving to the seventh.... The seventh being a single plane, a reality or configuration for reflection absorption. Now then, in your current configuration, you are effectively a mirror reality that absorbs instead of instead of reflecting.

We now place our attention on and prepare for our liaison. This one arrives in a new way for the experiences of our journeys. And what you experience are mirror reflections of his being and his consciousness. ("He" being a general term, here.) His name for purposes of this discourse and exchange is Companion. That is his function with you at this time.

JR: Greetings, Companion. It is an honor and a privilege to meet you and to experience to some degree your truth and your world. Thank you for this opportunity.

COMPANION: Companion speaks and speaks to you, one of the stars, one of the Light, one of the journeys, as companion as well. For in this moment, we are such. May we begin this shared understanding, for we also accept your reflections of your experience as well, by introducing our reality to you in terms and form that holds meaning for us. Our reality by comparison to your current more fixed position in your octave of location and pattern, is one of what you would call extreme flexibility. Our natural state is more in motion than anchored in any one reality. Even across our domain there are many variations in the reality of our experience simultaneously. Our uniformity of being is simultaneous movement in what you might call density at all times. For us to have the privilege of communication at this moment, to some degree a small segment of our reality--meaning me, your companion--has been fixed temporarily in the flux of our reality. Our particular form of consciousness and living beingness is less one-pointed compared to yours, your current experience. (And we say "current" because we know you as being from beyond this one current reality you find yourself in.)

But as I have said, our consciousness form can engage many realities simultaneously, not needing to fix on one at a time. Now, we can observe, from our perspective, there are merits in your particular formation of consciousness for engagement of your reality of the moment. Our particular form of consciousness allows us to appreciate yours, and many others at the same time. As you may have surmised, our so-called world is not so much a fixed reality planet as is yours, but more a domain of coalesced fluid movements in variable densities.

You ask of a name reference or symbolic pattern of such for identification of our domain and my being. The name "Companion" will have to suffice, for at our next opportunity Companion will no longer be the same. As to our domain, you may refer to it as the World called Spree, for that is our pattern that best represents the fluid nature of our vibrational existence. You may, if you choose, reflect upon the diversity of our current reality through the consciousness of Companion.

As you can see, our diversity of simultaneous experience and awareness is apparently without limit. We do not exist in the forms of your world, for these forms that you possess are incapable of our rapid movement and multi-dimensional pattern. Even to communicate with us as we are at this moment, and share understanding, you had to experience configuration reversal and indirect reflective absorption pattern. As your dear one has suggested, availability of communication in this current manner will end in approximately two of your planetary rotations. However, we feel it is incumbent upon us to honor the possibility we share at this time.

We thank you for this opportunity for introduction and shared understanding. May we continue at another time. And you will be instructed as to the new configuration to make this possible. We thank you, Companion of what you call Earth, for visiting with us, Companion of the World of Spree.

JR: Thank you, Companion. I look forward to our next opportunity.

JANU: Guiding your return to your current focus of reality in carefully orchestrated stages as you now are familiar with. All of the configurations are returned to original states.... One more level remains.... And now you are stabilized. We conclude this opportunity at this time, thanking you for your participation. Namaste.

Solar One speaks

December 14, 1998 A

JANU: As you well know and imagine, there are limitless opportunities for this kind of journey, the nature of which is so rich with life experience that one can gain universal perspective through its diversity. We would conclude from this that the life you experience at this time must, by this understanding, be included. So, networking with other worlds means that not only are you journeying in understanding into their reality, but they are journeying into yours as well. For networking means mutual communication and benefit.

Now, with that understanding, let us proceed this morning into a realm not understood or aware of by those in your reality, meaning the Earth experience, that finds its domain of influence in and around your sun, your solar body. Now then, the immediate rejections of this are that this reality cannot support life. It is too hot, too volatile, too much radiation, nuclear and otherwise. All these objections are true from a limited perspective. When we suggest that life is everywhere, it is not an ambiguous statement. Your solar body is life and life that has consciousness, meaning, purpose, service, connectedness, ongoingness, and evolution. Your solar body indeed does possess liaison opportunity and we are arranging such as we speak.

Leave behind, for the moment, that the physical solar body is its only reality. Allow your consciousness to engage the solar body harmoniously. That is correct. You are now beginning to appreciate, become aware of, its reality in consciousness and you can observe that the physical intensity of its existence is a byproduct of its consciousness. Now then, at this point, we have established a communication opportunity with liaison representative aspect of this solar consciousness, to begin at this time.

JR: Greetings, Solar Representative. May we initiate that which has been arranged into understanding.

SOLAR ONE: Greetings, brother in the Light. And we speak of the light from our understanding of it, which is more inclusive of a larger reality than your use of the term. We are light more than your relationship and experience to our existence as your solar body. We are light as focus of coalescence of an intensity of single thought generated by life and brought to bear, so to speak, giving us beingness. Be aware that a solar body extends far past your dimensional experience of it and we maintain the structure continuously. When a solar body mutates, if you will, from what you are currently aware of, these are transitional experiences born of that creative genius of our original design. So, in a truer way, a sun does not die. The creative genius continues through a variety of experiences. We exist vibrant continuously. We are aware of and experience our energetic nature continuously. We never experience inert reality. What you call peace and stillness in your experience, we call symmetry, harmoniousness, balance, movement, expression, and fulfillment.

The worlds that exist, called planets in your tongue, are elements within the solar reality. They are nurtured by the nature of the relationship and are part of the solar body function. What they provide is opportunities for various functional continuations, monitoring or feedback of outcome caused by the solar body ongoingness and movement through changes in expression. We are aware of and in contact with all life on all planet realities in the solar body reality. There is a sphere-like aspect to the solar body that is somewhat larger than the furthest path of any world within it. It does have boundary and presence.

I am identified for you as Solar One. My reality of beingness is not any form you would recognize. But you can experience my beingness and we allow this through the courtesy of those who arrange such accommodation. Let us merge now, briefly and slightly for a beginning. You are now moving away from your human identity and position and we have engaged your true nature with mine. And you understand more than before. You are a solar body as well. Many orbs within your being of life, each with their destiny and purpose, yet one with that you are. I am that nature and move and have my being throughout the entire body of this system of life. I am you and you are me, as we are at this moment. And you understand that the physical sun is but a part, and that its light intensity is but a focused element of the solar body that includes the entire system of worlds.

Let us now drift to our former arrangement to return again at another time. Slowly now, and with deliberation.

I am Solar One once more, in previous or original configuration announcing that we have successfully merged and shared a moment of truth. We welcome further opportunity to bring understanding of such things into your world.

Freeda Pon introduces his world

February 3, 2000 B

JANU: I am welcoming you to this opportunity to advance once more into the realm of "other worldly" realities, both like and unlike your own. We move forward with this at this time, proceeding then to an encounter with a race or species of beings not unlike your current existence except that these beings are remarkably well suited for advancement into other realities or dimensions, if you will.

What makes these somewhat special, from your perspective, is their characteristic of compliance to urgings from their true natures. This is accomplished by arranging their relationship with their existence, their environs, in such a way as to bring about a peace that allows them to perceive their true nature through their experiences with their environs, you see. Very few humans see reflected in their surroundings and ensuing experiences their own true nature, for they only perceive the physicality or materiality of their experiences and not the true or more complete reality of that they observe. These beings congregate in such a way as to focus their attention and awareness as a synergetic or cumulative byproduct of their gathering, that each one gains from the perceptions of the others. They have developed this characteristic through many eons and generations and, for the most part, are unaware of a lifestyle experience with your limitations.

They exist in a quarter of space that demonstrates a rift, if you will, in what you would call your space-time continuum, that leads to an existence characterized by a configuration of the elements or forces of life that permit movement in and out of a certain spectrum of dimensional realities. They are known as what sounds like in your tongue "Freeda" (Free-dah). As an example, each one's individual name would then be "Freeda-" and then a unique, characteristic sound or pattern, you see. One such comes to the surface, approaching this communication, named "Freeda Pon". You would consider a male gender.

Let us now then attune to this contact for further examination. As you can detect, this is a right brain connection, pattern matching this one's life pattern. We now have established a communication and we shall proceed.

JR: Greetings, Freeda Pon. May we understand each other by way of introduction and accommodation.

FREEDA PON: I am known to you in this term name, however my speech is such frequency as to render unintelligible to you that which I speak. Therefore, we remain in communication transposed to your octave. I come to you at this time at the request of our investigators, or you would call scientists, researching into the matters of life. We come and go in this way, contacting a variety of species from time to time. Our investigation into yours yields some surprising results, mainly being your insensitivity to other realities than your own. Therefore, this encounter is fairly unique and interesting to us at this time. We convey our greetings and accept your proposal for contact and exchange of information. We are bound by a certain order of protocol allowing contact in this way of prearranged agreement, you see. The conventions for communication are brought about by the differences in our frames of reference. We hope at this time that you will consider further exploration and bring about such communication, you see.

JR: Thank you, Freedapon. I honor and respect your protocols and agree to such communication. Thank you for the opportunity.

FREEDA PON: We shall proceed, then, at another time, based on this foundation of understanding. We withdraw.

JANU: Let us now close this window, this corridor, returning to the integrity of the pattern of your vehicles. Once the stabilization is complete, we will conclude this journey.

Zoarhon

November 25, 2001 C

JANU: Alive, then, within each moment is the understanding that prevails for each inquiry and each reality. Let us pursue then, at this moment, the acclimation to your vehicle for journeying into an unknown region for your world, of a dark star nebula and the Procansa System within it. Joining us on this journey will be an entourage beckoned by this enterprise. They assemble at this time and we shall proceed momentarily.

The Procansa System is small in stature and, yes, physical, but with a fascinating history and journey through life. We have gathered now at this time and shall proceed, bringing to bear the interests of those gathered. Liaison has been set. And now we embark.

There is a swirling experience as we adjust to this mode of dimensional shifting, for this journey is more one of adjustment than movement, if you will. Now then, as we engage this system, moving then to the bright star within it, there is an overlapping of consciousnesses forming a bridge for communication. The Procansa System yields three solar systems. The object of our journey today being the third sector of this quadrant. We move our attention now to the blue planet orbiting the larger of the three solar bodies. There are six worlds in this system, this being the fourth from the sun. A world a little larger than your own, having three days to your one. Its polar regions being permanently frozen and extending to approximately 30 degrees latitude from each pole. The band of physical life that exists on this world does so near the equator and is in the form of aquatic and atmospheric life.

This world of water and ice beacons a message of light to those worlds who would abuse their worlds. The purpose of this journey selection is to illustrate the fate of such folly. This world knew greatness and was known as Zoarhon. Its fate befell it due to the rampant use of atmospheric pollutants and destabilizing influences of random radiations for scientific purposes. Destabilizing, then, the energy grids forming the vortexes of interdimensional balance and nourishment for this world's vitality. It is now resting in a pool of energy without these connections. It will take a disturbing influence of some magnitude to re-energize this world's grid structure and subsequent vortexes. Its influence on the rest of its system has been slow in building but tends to destabilize the rest of the system.

Learn this lesson well as we depart this vicinity, bringing closure, then, to this journey. We thank you for this opportunity to bring this understanding to you. Leaving with you, then, the desire for remedy. Good afternoon.

A world of profound peace and harmony

March 24, 2005 B

JANU: I am Janu speaking, savoring this rich opportunity to once more greet another culture. Another domain beckons the interest. What we search to achieve this day is unencumbered by superstition and confusion, for it is at once a live symphony of the peace of space and its realm of beings, you might call inhabitants, for they are less concrete, in terms of your existence, dominions, worlds if you will, meaning parameters of existence that are transcendent among the worlds of our networking, you see.

Let us engage this opportunity. Leave behind any rebellious nature or confrontational or demands or requirements of revelation and enter the domain of profound peaceful existence where the magic of harmony prevails. Slowly now, awaken to that which unfolds before you of profound harmonious existence. Where you do not see people here, as such, but life without borders or limits, life without location, life without materiality, but profound insight and longevity and co-existence with the rest of life, to some degree unaware of the denser realms such as your own, but more attuned to, in tune with, the light of each.

A name will not bring you to this experience, only the peace we are in at the moment. We leave no mark in our passing, and withdraw in peace. Namaste.

Coexistence

April 6, 2012

JANU: Let us begin this morning with a journey or adventure into the unknown realm of coexistence. There are worlds, that coexist and there are many attributes to this coexistence. Let us begin with those that combine energies.

Now, physically speaking, from your perspective, they do not coexist physically, but they do coexist dimensionally, energetically, ideologically, and scientifically, philosophically, as well. They are known to each other by the form they take on with each other, in the sense of combined interest, inspiration, and a delicate balance of the nuances of influence. These worlds began this journey of coexistence in their early formation because of their affinities for, a grasp of, a larger life, a universe filled with life. Travel to other worlds was not an option but connecting in other ways was. This relationship became a way of life so completely that life without it is incomprehensible. Peace between these worlds was never lost, for the element in your world of direct physical contact or conflict did not exist. So relationships were negotiated through more intimate understanding and knowledge of each other. And yes, there are those worlds that coexist with more than one other. And they enjoy networking in a more profound way.

Let us see then into one of these relationships, that begins with two worlds within your galaxy. A star cluster known by them but nameless. The code or method of communication from one to another is through what you would call a binary principle, that is absolute in detail of identification, for these binary patterns superimpose on one another and recognition is instant, as is communication. Their coded life relationships afford them an intimacy in life that brings about a connection or oneness that exists throughout their reality. You might try to describe this in mathematical terms, but they do not apply. Their coded references to each other communicate harmony, well-being, and integrity to each other that one may not fall from these balances of life without being restored by the others.

Their success of this breeds interest from other worlds not so inclined, but their relationship is so profoundly intertwined that it is not understood by others to emulate. These occurrences in life go unnoticed by many, are imagined by others but are seen as requiring too much to give up to enter into.

These beings are non-corporeal but they are conscious. Viable lifeforms, societies, structures are not all just physical, you see. There are worlds and realms vital, rich, and diverse you do not yet perceive. These coexisting worlds are not limited in form or relationship to the two we mention at this time. These are but one example. Namaste.

Reecom

June 3, 2012 A

JANU: We have with us this morning that which is needed to attune to the life that exists on other worlds, other platforms of life. For these are platforms. They exist to support the continuation of life in motion, awakening consciousness, realization of the potential of life. As you have been shown, there are other kinds of platforms that are not planets, you see, and they exist as well, for the same purpose.

This morning's journey includes some of these, for what we visit is a group of worlds. They exist across seven solar systems and have a long history of association. Their association includes visitation, shared culture and language. They have a history of nine worlds. There is a home world that initiated this association in the beginning. This world was visited by another, not of this nine, you see, and told of these possibilities. This world is the one that we speak with today. It is known as the "Home World" by those involved and is known by the name as "Reecom," meaning 'home world.'

This world is best understood as one of high technology; however, this does not dominate this culture, which is born of an embrace of life that rivals many others. This principle was the foundation for, and is, the reality that exists in the relationship with the other eight, you see. This relationship is modified from one to another world, based on cultural differences and norms. This world realizes its purpose and its strength is its relationship, its honoring of these other cultures, you see. These belong to an alliance that is known far and wide, for its travels have connected it with trade routes, if you will.

The ice world

JANU: We have with us this morning, as of your choosing, this subject of your interest—and ours as well, we might add—the networking with other worlds. Much to be gained here, on both sides of this opportunity. May we continue then at this time with this networking.

This journey includes that which comes from a little known region of reality that pertains to the movement of stars and their entourage of worlds. Today's world of interest lies between two galaxies near to each other, enough for there to be a star and its worlds seemingly not possessed by either, you see. A rare occurrence; however, one that does exist. Another rarity, this star has but one world. Other bodies, but one world. Let us reach, then, into the knowledge of this world and see what there is, you see.

This world came apart from a larger body and settled into an orbit around this star. This body was captured and accumulated, accreted enough material over time to become a viable world that supports life. This world remains in a stable orbit and its life consumes the energy from its star, its sun, in a somewhat unusual way. This world is covered with much ice that has clarity enough to focus the solar light in intensities of focus that produce unusual lifeforms. These lifeforms dwell in pockets of ice melt with environmental temperatures not unlike your own. The lifeforms are in early stages of development of evolution but have consciousness and are nurtured by their environment but have yet to find each other, completely.

This would appear as an ice world to an observer. These formations of life are largely gelatinous, with some elements of being solid. Their communication is somewhat...is, in fact, chemical in nature and vibrational movement. They begin each day with a song and a dance that brings life to the community. They are not yet capable of your communication; however, they can be known and harmonized with. We do so at this time, with your indulgence. This is a new experience for them, and as you can see, they have become quite agitated, not knowing how to respond to their benefit. We pause to allow them to absorb what they may, but for the first time they are aware of something outside their traditional experience.

We have limited this to one group, or one community, not to overwhelm the world, you see. An experiment of sorts, the results of which yet to be known. We leave them at this time, wishing them well. Returning, then, to our current venue, balance and stability. For the time being, we'll refer to this world as 'the ice world.'

Anomalous conditions of the existence of other worlds

Aug. 6, 2012

JANU: The world we have in mind this morning exists between two stars in a nebula. Unusual, though it does occur. This nebula exists enough to obscure this world's vision beyond it. This phenomenon of existence brought about by occurrences that generate enough gravity to coalesce a world nurtured by two stars in proximity. This world is influenced by the attraction of these stars with tremors, from time to time, that exacerbate the instability of this world. This world has no life forms yet, but will in time.

Its importance to these investigations is that networking, so to speak, brings into the awareness the need for certain configurations within the universe to accommodate life. This world is relatively small, cold and barren. Its importance is the influence it will have on other worlds in times to come. Its position is unstable, meaning that it could begin to move in one direction or another, leaving the door open, so to speak, for capture into a system of worlds.

This world has been visited and is known of. The ingredients for life exist there; however, too cold to allow it. In a universe of patterns and seemingly stable conditions, there are many such as this. Forms of existence can be precarious, allowing for influential changes in more stable regions.

This series will include many anomalous realities of worlds and cultures and conditions; therefore, with an open mind and heart, allow these journeys to expand your understanding and appreciation of life. Namaste.

Stage One

Sept. 14, 2012 A

JANU: We have adjustments to be made for the world of our exploration this morning requires this. Let there be, then, that needed for this journey. Your vehicles are being re-configured, to a degree, to accommodate this.

Let us journey, then, to another world that brings into view a world that is a platform for life, but not of its own making. No indigenous population. This world lies on the outer rim of your galaxy, frequently visited for the purpose of staging. Staging, then, as a base for many purposes, to include journeys to other worlds and, for some, to other galaxies. This world is fairly barren, sunny, sandy, and no remarkable features. Geologically quiet, which is desirable for staging equipment and supplies. Its name is known by its visitors in their languages as Stage One. There is a small contingent there, replaced from time to time, to ensure these stagings are undisturbed. This world enjoys the radiation from three suns.

Many grand journeys have been staged here and the technology to do so is beyond your understanding. Journeying to another galaxy is grand indeed but must be performed by those who have mastered trans-dimensional technology.

The cultures that stage from this world cooperate and respect each other's stagings, but are not necessarily of one purpose or mind. Namaste.

Foren of the planet Reebon

October 27, 2012

JANU: We have with this morning a region of life bespeckled, so to speak, with many worlds, many cultures, many histories.

We seek out one this morning bearing the name of Reebon (r-e-e-b-o-n phonetic). This world circles another and the pair reach into the galaxy farther than yours, about 70% closer in. These two worlds have an interesting relationship in their positions. They circle each other, rather than one circling another that is relatively stationary. Their combined paths orbit a sun elliptically.

Reebon is the smaller of the two, by about a third. But Reebon has more life. The life as such knows its neighbor. Its science includes a knowledge of its system, its origin, the dynamics of its existence, and now they know of you. It is common on this world to communicate in this way, and there is a group tuning in, if you will, to this communication. The group is represented by one named Foren (f-o-r-e-n) and would communicate at this time. Ready to do so.

JR: Welcome, Foren. May we begin our mutual understanding of each other? Welcome.

FOREN: Yes, brother. Foren I am and we are more one than you know. You will, however, understand this in time. We are a group of beings of some enlightenment that journey as you do and greet you as brother, fellow journeyer. We have many such tales to tell of our travels and our life. We can see into yours via this communication and welcome your communication.

Adjusting, then, to this moment. We have others here who inquire as well, as to this opportunity and what to be made of it. We encourage the development of a foundation for understanding and mutual interest. There are approximately 20 of us, exactly 20 of us, at this moment. We have the ability to communicate as a group in this manner.

A question has arisen as to the nature of your world's ability to travel to other worlds. We are observing your capability at this time and see that it is in its beginning development. One should be full of awe and wonder at the possibilities that lay before you, as we have as well in our world.

Life expectancy on our world is approximately 900 of your years, but 50 of ours, as you measure time. Our orbital path is much longer, according to your time, for we are farther from our sun. We do have families and they are large, indeed.

Our technology does include travel beyond our world; however, we are not so dependent upon it for discovery. For we discover as you, our brother, through these journeys. The fruits of these journeys are the catalyst for, the reason for, our travels beyond our world to benefit more fully.

Yes, our communication link is weakening for it is our first attempt at this with you. Let us meet again, and we shall improve.

JR: Thank you, Foren. I agree and look forward to this, that we meet again. Thank you.

JANU: An interesting adventure for a first connection. And we shall return. Namaste.

Exploring other worlds

Nov. 9, 2012

JANU: This morning's journey moves in the direction of the community of worlds, their many differences, their many common grounds, their many evolutionary states. We see worlds in view with common human form, different languages, of course, far different cultures but an appetite for life, thoughts of expansion to other worlds, some with the technology to do so. None of these are aware of your Earth, too far away, although they seek worlds like yours.

One in particular we see is almost blue entirely in color, meaning the oceans of their world dominate the surface, land masses total much less than yours. Therefore, much of their cultures and technology uses underwater and floating habitats, cultural centers. Some are enormous in size and travel underwater and on the surface around their world. These mobile platforms of life include times of gathering together for communication and exchange, but they travel their world and their resources for construction include the seafloor as well, you see, for their land is limited. And they're experimenting with off-world resources. Weather-wise, the world is rather quiet. Entire generations appear and disappear totally at sea.

Leaving this world, we venture to another whose climate is quite different, very arid, very hot and dry. Still with human form, these people have vast underground complexes, gather their moisture from deep within their world, and seldom venture to the surface. Extreme efforts in conservation of water and reclamation. It is valued almost as a currency, you see. Much conversation as to reaching to other worlds, but not the technology yet, you see. Much of their food is grown hydroponically. Sunlight is allowed in through ports in the surface, allowing light in while retaining the humidity of the underground.

Withdrawing from this world, we explore other worlds with non-human species. One world in particular, where the conscious beings exist underwater and are not amphibious. Their culture exists primarily of a chemistry that coagulates seawater for the containment of nutrients, environmental norms, and protection from other creatures. They have nurseries and exist in many different forms and are very intelligent. There is a softness to their forms, but then become quite rigid when needed. Yes, they communicate electrically, sometimes in contact with each other but not always. They are telepathic and can see at great distances. So their consciousness embraces most of their world and its species.

We withdraw from this world and embrace three others of similar construction and population. These three form a triad of unified worlds. These are etheric-like beings, nearly invisible, belonging to a race of beings found elsewhere in the universe. Very enlightened, very conscious, and have a beautiful relationship with life and each other. They tend to isolate from other worlds not as peaceful as theirs. They are the record keepers, historians, very sensitive to the currents of life, energetic movements and impressions. Their affinity for each other would appear, to other races, other species, as so united they are virtually one. But make no mistake, they are diverse in thought, perception, and creativity. Namaste.

A dying world being rescued

Dec. 8, 2012

JANU: We have with us this morning the opportunity to journey once more into the heavens, if you will, while networking with other worlds. Networking is an interesting word here, for how far you go with this, how complete the networking may vary from world to world, depending upon mutual interests.

For this morning's journey, let us take an excursion into a region of the universe still within your galaxy that belongs to, or succumbs to, the pressures of living within an area that registers highly in radiation—yes, solar radiation of a dying sun, due to the influence of a nearby star, or sun if you will. Now, the smaller of the two is pulling apart the larger, for the smaller is very dense indeed and at that stage in life where it becomes so. The residents of the world we will visit were in the proximity of the larger star or sun, and, of course, their world is greatly influenced by this. There is life there, but it is struggling and endeavoring to leave its world without a destination for their distant location. So our contact this morning includes compassion for those who struggle to live.

So the networking aspect of this journey has to do with the struggle for life. They have approximately 100 solar orbits left 'til they must leave. Their technology includes small craft for departure, but the dilemma is many will be left behind. The journeys have already begun but none have, as yet, returned to carry more.

We leave a message with them this morning to continue their struggle, but, as we have just learned, help is on the way. It will arrive in about 5 solar orbits. They did not know this, but they do now and will make preparations. So hope is restored. Their transmissions for help were heard. The craft that are coming are much larger. Thirty in number, capable of much greater distances and speed. Namaste.

Ancient ones of Mars

Jan. 19, 2013

JANU: Welcome this morning to a journey of sorts. By this we mean, a world closer to home, if you will. Our journey this morning extends to Mars and its rich history. Now, how then does one network with a world seemingly devoid of life? Networking can take place--past, present, or future. And Mars certainly has a past.

In its heyday, so to speak, Mars was a world rich with life coming and going, surviving and dealing with their challenges. It is difficult for some to see Mars as a populated, civilized world, when its civilization was in the distant past and, in your world, the distant past means little or no civilization. The cultures of Mars spanned many generations but the presence of other civilizations, other species from other worlds mingling, coexisting, was widely known and accepted. There were skirmishes, of course, cultural clashes. There are those in Earth's cultures and societies with similar nature; however, they have blended in and become invisible. On Mars, however, one can network, so to speak, with what has been and what will come, as we are doing this morning.

There are those cultures that knew Mars, retaining memory of their involvement, and they can be networked with, through their connection with the reality of Mars. May we example this, this morning, as we network with those who knew and still know Mars.

ANCIENT ONES: Yes, our brother. We knew Mars and had association and still do, in some ways. We began our climb into what you would call advanced consciousness technology and society around that time of the visitation and brief colonization of that world. In a sense, we were born there, long before humanity. Our history is ancient to the extreme. No longer needing to travel by craft to visit other worlds, we still visit Mars from time to time, but not physically. Being fairly dormant for these many ages, Mars still enjoys or contains the residue of its history. We reach into these matters to continue our journey in life. We exist mainly as a species that knows no limits in terms of longevity, for we dwell mainly in a more etheric reality and therefore not limited to what you call travel.

You reach for a name to describe us but there is none, our brother. We know who and what we are without that. Let us just say that we are the ones who were born there. You may visit us any time you choose, but be mindful that our reality is not as yours. There is much for you to discover on that world, many records of a time when humanity was just beginning. We knew of you with no need to visit. Mars, on the other hand, at that time, was populated with many cultures that found their way into their future.

Yes, we are like the wind that comes and goes. At this time, we leave you.

The Light Bringers

Feb. 28, 2013

JANU: Networking in this way brings about a broader foundation of understanding of the diversity of life, including your own. The arrangement for this morning's communication was born of a desire ages ago when you were on another world. This communication finds you in connection with a distant world you have known before. The presence of that culture is drawing near, as you are aware. Let there begin, then, a dialogue sought after long ago, renewing, then, friendships.

JR: Welcome, then, friend. May we continue what began long ago as if it were only a moment, with many changes.

THE LIGHT BRINGERS: Yes, we hear you, our brother. And we are one, and have been all these many years, as you put it. We are the ones who belong to a group of understanding that transcend time and space and have journeyed far and wide. We are the result of communication with many cultures and now your own. We are the brothers, in your words, that connect with the True Light of Life and offer it to other worlds, other realities. This you have known and participated in. The True Light of Life enriches our existence that others may do the same. This is our service. And we are the Light Bringers. We are the light that shines upon darkness to reveal its truth. The darkness of ignorance, misunderstanding, and, for some, brutality.

The world of our origins that you once knew was in a cluster of stars within your galaxy, but very near the Central Sun. You were on a world in the outer rim of the galaxy, looking for the light that you seek at this time. Understand this, our brother, our modus operandi is to bring light for you to find within you. So the quest remains yours, as well as the discovery. Only the journey it took to achieve it.

No, we are not the only ones living in this way. Finding the light as we describe within you opens your world of experience to include many who live this way. These connections of networking offer an understanding that inspires living this way as well. Welcome home, our brother, for we have walked the path of life before with many discoveries that are your heritage and still live within you. We will walk together again, our brother. Until then, we are one.

Seventy worlds joined in the Light

April 13, 2013

JANU: Shall we journey then this morning to a network of worlds? Consisting of 70 worlds, to now include your own, these worlds have come together, so to speak, for the purpose of cooperation in many areas of life. Their primary opportunity is to raise the collective consciousness of these worlds, bringing about prosperity in life as a direct result of their collective attunement with life. Collaboration is a strong theme here, for they share each other's strengths to overcome deficiencies. And, no, all of these worlds or civilizations are not physical as is yours. So this consciousness raising serves the collaboration of many different realities.

Now networking doesn't necessarily include, physical contact, thus again the importance of consciousness raising, for visitation between these worlds is very real but not always physical, you see. The presence and power of existence beyond physicality is a major portion of life in this universe, as you are beginning to realize. That does not mean these cultures need to be isolated, one from another, for they are all part of and created from the One Life. These worlds are so widespread that thinking of them as a cluster of worlds to be pinpointed in location is futile. Our journeys to many worlds illustrate this.

"So what is required to become part of this network?" you ask. In the finer realities of life, there are no requirements other than your harmonious nature with these realities. All in harmony are welcome. Which allows for our visit today and is a collective of cultures that brings warmth and familiarity to your being. The ideals of your consciousness and imaginings already exist.

Your sojourn was meant to bring this kind of truth and love for life to your world. Not you alone, our brother. Many have come. As with collaborative life, much to be gained from all involved, as you will discover on these journeys. So find comfort and peace, and confidence in the understanding that what lives in your heart lives in many others throughout the universe. Namaste.

The Domien

April 19, 2013

JANU: An exploration shall begin with a moon of a world that lists itself as a world of its own, for it is populated, advanced, and well developed. It is two-thirds the size of your world and belongs to a group of beings who have little to do with the world they circle, for they are a more advanced culture. This moon has existed for a very long time, three billion years and has learned to get its energy from the varying gravitational field from the world it circles. Much as your scientists have learned to gain energy from the tides of your oceans, with underwater generators, you see. Same principle here. And it amounts to a large amount of energy, all that they need. Their proximity to their world that they circle is 700 thousand of your miles, but the mass of this moon makes that quite close enough, you see.

As to the culture there, it is not strictly human and not indigenous but developed there. This species has some characteristic of what you have heard of as reptilian, although that no longer dominates. The species is physical and water is an issue. The water is mostly under the surface and they have a symbiotic relationship with these reservoirs. That's why you see few features on this moon. They have mastered the art of accumulating moisture from subterranean pockets.

They do have craft that move about between worlds. So many of their needs are cargo on these craft. Location of this moon is in the northwest quadrant of your sky, your northern hemisphere, 222 parsecs from you. They call themselves the "Domien" (pronounced Doe-mean). Their average stature is approximately seven of your feet in measure as adult. And yes, their craft draw from the world they circle for materials. They have keen minds capable of extrasensory perception and journeys, as you do, in consciousness. They have never visited your world and would see no profit in it, because of the distance.

The surface color of this moon, as you can see, is a varying brown and gray and quite smooth. And, yes, it is the only moon that circles that world. We might visit these again as things develop in our journeys. Namaste.

Submitting a blue world in the Bell Star region for networking June 3, 2013

JANU: Once more we search life for meaning and purpose. Networking with other worlds is such a journey. Each opportunity need not be limited to the group of seventy. All in the group are free to reach out and expand the network.

For this morning's journey, we shall visit a world that has become significant. This world exists in a region of space you have formally called the Bell Star region. It has recently turned its attention upon connecting with other worlds. It is currently in a night cycle. It is a blue world of deep oceans. The beings of this world hover in the atmosphere but can rest on the sea and the land. They have pronounced features and move about through the power of will and consciousness. Their sustenance is from their sun and the forces of nature. They appear somewhat as if they're having little need of shelter or other technologies. They have existed for millions of years, not subject to the frailties of your physical existence. They are part of a group of similar realities, living a rather harmonious life, without rancor. An interesting addition to the network of worlds and we offer this connection to the network for consideration.

Dreebanoo: an introduction July 24, 2013

JANU: For today's journey, let us begin with a reach into the location of a world that was populated at one time, which ended completely and sometime later began again. This is not a usual occurrence although not unique, for varying reasons. The first civilization moved on, the world no longer fulfilling their needs. The current civilization is fairly new, discovering here and there some artifacts from the previous civilization but not generally understanding the scope of that existence.

What we accomplish this morning is establishing a connection as an opportunity for them to not only learn of the planet's past but to benefit from goals achieved and come into their own as they make the world their own. We will establish connection with a contact for this purpose. (Extended pause)

For the time being, we shall refer to this world as Dree-bah'-noo. Once contact is made, they will declare their name. This is an introduction to a series. Many interesting stories here. Until then, namaste.

Solar system of aligned planets

July 30, 2013

JANU: Exploring other worlds is an interesting element of discovery on the path of awakening, for these platforms of life potentially or currently active hold many surprises. Revelations such as these bring about a maturity of the diversity of life and its collective reality. No longer just individual elements, but an entity.

For today's journey, let us visit or explore, if you will, that which belongs to a cluster or group of worlds, some of which are in an orbital relationship that are synchronized such that their collective mass causes their star to move with their orbit. Their orbits have close proximity with no moons, for they could not survive the intense gravitational interactions. These worlds are stable in their orbits, but not so stable in their configuration. Enormous amounts of energy tug and pull on these. The star is much larger than yours and its gravitational field is strong enough to absorb this alignment, yet is still influenced.

The proximity of these worlds to each other causes there to be symmetry of a collective gravitational field that makes it difficult for visitors to visit any one of these. For this reason, they stand alone in life, as platforms for life but yet to achieve this. Their orbital paths are on the same plane. They, of course, are an interesting study of dynamics of solar systems that do not have more randomly placed worlds and moons. The relative sizes are with the smaller on the inner orbits and larger with larger orbits, you see.

Namaste.

The harmony world: an introduction

Sept. 20, 2013

JANU: Explore we may and explore we will, for there are countless numbers of worlds that humanity would benefit from exploring. Much to be learned of the nature of the systems of life, and not only their existence but their modality of continuation.

For this morning's journey, let us explore a world, touch its reality. This world lies among a group of worlds in a group of stars that's best described as monotheistic in its culture, but for them this description is an embrace of an understanding of the One Life. Their monotheism is born of an attempt to discover reality, and, to do so, they ventured far and wide and discovered that life is everywhere and shines its light on everything. It is the one true path, true reality, that connects any consciousness, any open mind and heart, to absolutely the rest of life. It is omnipresent and, not only that, is the source of all existence. Now, this reality it is not revered as a deity, but as the True Nature of all of life and the source of its existence and requires no allegiance other than a consciousness open to your own true nature.

The society of this world is so enriched by this understanding that conflicts are not seen as such, but as explorations of different facets of existence, of the truth of life, opportunities to explore countless avenues of understanding. So their perception is not conflicting perceptions but another facet of what is and what can be. This understanding that they live by allows them to perceive others not so much as to be taken advantage of, or taken from, but partners in the quest for advancement. They rejoice in each other's victories for they understand that all victories are theirs as well. An isolated mind and heart cannot see this, for its modality limits it. Hard for them to see this truth, for what role models do they have? It speaks then to, doesn't it, that these beginnings of the awakening of humanity are miracles, indeed.

The society of this other world beckons others to understand their life, for they know with a certainty that the more that do, the better for everyone, for they understand the connection and the depths and breadth of true oneness. Oneness has many layers, many elements, many perspectives, and countless opportunities to grow. It matters not so much a name for this world or its location but what it experiences, what it is capable of, and what these beings grow into on their destiny. For purposes of return to this communication, this world, for further exploration, let us refer to it as "the harmony world." Thank you for this opportunity, and namaste.

A human world, "Dazen," attempting communication with other worlds

Oct. 17, 2013 B

JANU: Yes, there are those who reach for contact with other worlds, even as your SETI does on the Earth. What we serve this evening are those who reach to make contact.

There is one world of humanity particularly that does so reach, but they do so with energetic transmission that is unlike your electro-magnetic propagation. Their transmissions have reached the Earth before but gone undetected, for they operate with a form of energy that is subtler, less dense, and similar to the energy of thought projection, of which they are capable and can amplify such. When we have our communication with other worlds, it is not accomplished through your common form of energy. This world we speak of uses an energy as a medium of transmission impressed with a focus of thought manifested, to a degree, to emulate intuition. There are worlds who have achieved this technology and will one day soon respond, but Earth is not one of them yet. So theirs is a combination of technology, subtle energy, and thought impression.

The world we speak of call themselves the 'Dazen' and we are attuning to a new transmission, which is formed by patterns more than language, spoken language. Where the nature of these patterns, when perceived, guide one to respond in the direction of the logic of these. What they are seeking here is a patterned response that, in their opinion, could lead to compatibility of species, rather than conflict and distrust. So what we understand here is their motivation and purpose for the transmission. They use this system because they have achieved success with it, between known factions and with other human worlds similarly advanced.

Our service this evening is to support their efforts with insight into anticipating what other worlds are capable of detecting and understanding. Namaste

Settling in on Dreebanoo

Nov. 4, 2013

JANU: For this morning's journey, we will connect with what you might call a 'science world' or very focused in science. Now, understand that humanity's meaning for the world 'science' is primarily of technology. The world of which we speak has science as well, however not limited to humanity's interpretation.

This world Dreebanoo, that we visited once before, is a world where mentality appears to reign supreme with undercurrents of passion and emotion, for their society comes from another world and a journey of long duration where the scientific model for thinking and perceiving life and mastering their condition is what carried them through, for that needed to survive was fulfilled by that ability. Now that they have arrived at their new world, a relationship will begin and ensue with the planet, reshaping their perspective of life a bit more than they're aware of at this moment, for their habitat has not been a living reality, such as a world. It's as if they were starting again.

Many of their craft will be preserved, for many fear that they may have to move once more, but this will pass. They are already planning and building habitats, structures for various functions, transportation, and food resources, many of which are transferred from their craft which have served so well.

They are tall and slender in stature and the women, the females, seem to carry their young on or about their person everywhere they go. A cultural condition from long ago. There is a group consciousness in this society of mutual support, with the attitude that this makes them stronger for survival, and a sense of well-being, for they have been through much. Namaste.

Understanding the life of other worlds

Dec. 13, 2013

JANU: When one considers that other worlds are at great distance, we must realize that, in other realities, they are not. The differences have more to say than distances.

Understanding other worlds is served by understanding your own. For most of humanity, the Earth is an unknown world, when observing its many realities, for the Earth is more than a physical world, a physical planet. It is a world of energies moving on many realities, many levels with many characteristics and functions. Not to mention lifeforms. If a world were only physical, could such lifeforms exist and flourish? A parallel question is: Can one dimension exist without the rest? There is a hierarchy of life co-existing, interdependent, and mutual supporting.

Other worlds have co-dependencies as well, co-existences, the realities of life. The planets are a manifestation of these many realities and life exists as a complete system of life; therefore, a better understanding of these questions is based upon exploring this system of life: how it functions, re-creates itself, and its systemic condition. So then, exploring other worlds is exploring this system of life, and, when doing so, you begin to understand your own system of life and the scope of its reality.

Now, there are balances of relationships in motion, changing, flowing, resulting in, among other things, worlds, lifeforms, the destinies of life. Building a foundation of understanding on this nature, when networking with another world, brings understanding to its diversity and the roots of its existence.

So, how does one network with the Earth, when most of its reality is not understood? By observing it as a lifeform, complex, vibrant, vulnerable, changing its own self-perception, yet more aware of its enduring existence, and all that that includes, than its inhabitants. The Earth has memories that are accessible and are active and part of its presence in life. When have you considered the memories of another world that are vibrant as it processes its own existence in the life that it is?

So, you see, networking with other worlds is to network with the memories and the presence and the life that those worlds are, including your own. The Wheeyah Codes help prepare for this by learning the language of worlds, no longer isolated to your personal perceptions of life. Namaste.

Reedak

Feb. 5, 2014

JANU: For this morning's journey, we shall include a look at the novel worlds among the more common. Many are what you would call bizarre, and many similar to each other.

The bizarre include those that take life lightly, bordering on the humorous. And their embrace of life some might describe as 'silly.' However, they have a social freedom that might serve the Earth humanity to a degree. Where humanity takes disease seriously, they do not. In fact, they find that approach to life virtually painful. They call their world what sounds like "Ree-dak" and they call each other "prones", meaning friends, companions, connected in life. They have families and procreation, children, universities. But their universities are not campuses with large buildings. They are institutions, if you must use that term, spread throughout life, the culture, their surroundings. And their theme is to understand and embrace the many realities of their existence, of their surroundings, in a very lighthearted manner. And, as a result, the life that surrounds them exchanges freely its truth with theirs. They demonstrate this and teach this to their children: a natural connection with life and each other based in lightheartedness.

You ask if they have technology and science. Yes, they do, but their reasons for it, their purpose behind it, is not to conquer or military or do battle from fear. It is to become more one with the magic and beauty of life that they enjoy. Therefore, they achieve a balance in their lives, in emotions and attitude, perceptions, and physicality as well. More conducive to insight, intuition, yes, even telepathy and journeying such as we. Their science is not limited to equipment but more to expanding their abilities and appreciation of life.

They have a happy existence and do not fear time, as humans do, of deadlines, limitations, growing old. They are at peace in life, a life that is filled with many pursuits of understanding and relationships. Therefore, their life forces are not bombarded with anxieties and frustrations, angers and negative emotion, but live in coordination, cooperation with each other. Namaste.

The Delegation of Twelve from Pagus

Feb. 6, 2014

JANU: We have with us this morning a delegation from a star system in Orion's Belt called "Pagus." This delegation has the intent and purpose of forming an alliance with the Earth through, in part, our journeys, for it has observed that there are other arrangements such as ours around the Earth, forming a nucleus best described as a new direction for humanity in its destiny of achievement and service.

This delegation is twelve in number and will initiate the alliance. This alliance shall form or forge a path of commitment to the evolution of humanity into a greater influence in the community of life. The twelve have been chosen for their expertise in such matters.

From now on, or at least the time being, they will be referred to as the Delegation from Pagus. We welcome our brothers and, of course, agree with what can be achieved. Thank you, our brother, and namaste.

A world similar to Earth

Feb. 19, 2014

JANU: Fortunately for these journeys, and we who participate in them, there comes upon us an experience of exploring a world that resembles the Earth exactly. This world is similar in age, populated by humanoids, with differences. Consciousness development is similar.

This world has lived in isolation to this point, attempting to explore other worlds by means of telepathy. Realizing that their technology and economy cannot support the physical journey, you see, but undeterred by this, their explorations continue being more with this method. This allows them to explore worlds inhospitable with atmosphere or temperature or other conditions, and have learned much. Some of these revelations have been taken within their culture, their consciousness, and their science, to fine-tune their own experience on their world. Reaching into their history, we see a culture and a consciousness ready for contact. But this is not what motivates them, primarily. It is to explore and understand, benefiting from the exploration and, when possible, communicating what they have gained with other worlds, to other worlds.

They are not inclined to give a name to their world or their species, at this time. They are not as materialistic as humanity of the Earth is. And their life pursuits are more esoteric and etheric, for they are discovering the power of this pursuit in life and what it affords. These pursuits and the development of the skill have led towards mutual understanding among them, employing this method in their own relationships. This ability has led towards an understanding of what you call disease or illness, and they are gradually mastering these conditions, which encourages them further into developing this method of connecting with life.

Much to be learned here. We will return as needed, without a name. Namaste.

A brown world

Apr. 1, 2014

JANU: For today's journey, networking with other worlds, let us come upon a world that is rich in agriculture, nature, only their 'greenery' is more brown than green, for this world is rich in soil conditions with much silicon and iron and phosphorus. Their waters are a blend of these constituents, as well as oxygen and hydrogen. The result of all this is a food source that brings about or encourages a dullness to the consciousness, the powers of perception, leaving a challenge that the True Nature has to overcome. Communication between them is more in the form of gestures and body language. The benefit of this situation, surprisingly to some, would be relatively good health, and freedom from disease, and rapid healing response is included.

The networking element of this journey is in the form of a sense of camaraderie based upon peaceful co-existence. We have empathy with these, for they have comportment befitting more conscious beings in the midst of the dullness, if you will. We do not see a name for this world or these beings, for as we have said their language is more gesture and configuration.

They do not have the industrial intensity and push for power and control that humans do. Their quests in life are more in the direction of embracing their circumstance with deeper understanding and greater benefit. They have their own brand of peace and we honor this and support their life and their destiny.

Namaste.

The Dweedle and our origins

Apr. 23, 2014

JANU: For this morning's journey, let us expand our view of the larger human family. Interestingly, as we explore the depths of this subject, we discover that humanity's roots, origins, are from another race of beings long ago. Now, this race still exists in the universe, but no longer resembles the roots of humanity that emerged from this connection. So how then can one put limits or borders on human identity, strictly speaking, when it has connection with another race as to its origin?

This race of beings existed within the vicinity of the human-like worlds and then moved on, for their path of evolution changed. The relevance to humanity today is humanity's stubbornness and determination to survive and master its future. This species is aware of humanity and its development and shall connect with it once again. But humanity is not ready for this, and they know it. And humanity is not their only legacy. They have sponsored three other species; another way life progresses and is connected.

The few millions of years of human existence are considered old indeed. It is not. The species that bore it are far older. And their name has changed over time. At one point, called the Dweedle. Let there be then the acknowledgement and embrace that humanity is an older and larger reality than many consider, and one day will cross paths with its origins and begin to understand more of the heritage of this and its own nature. Useful when encountering new species and new realities.

Receiving contact from the world named 'Roo'

May 27, 2014

JANU: For this morning's journey, let us attune to a transmission of sorts from another world, as requested. This morning's journey's nature is one of attuning to a world among many that communicate in our manner. Become the receiver, then, of that which transcends time and distance, for the network of life is unlimited.

We are listening to a presence of consciousness, of True Nature, from a world that exists nearby. The environment of this world is somewhat barren compared to yours, so life is quite different. The name of this world, by its inhabitants, is 'Roo,' r-o-o approximates. The dwellings are primitive by Earth's standards, as is the culture, in some ways. A smaller world than yours, with an orbit that fluctuates elliptically. The consciousness you are reading this through is not technically trained but reaches out to know more of life. This one is an elder.

We honor this one's quest and offer enrichment, and the joy of discovery and expansion of consciousness, and respect. We linger with this one for a time.

The Others

June 5, 2014

JANU: Networking with other worlds requires a commitment that includes attunement to beings of that world or, in some cases, for an unpopulated world would include commitment to its life presence.

For this morning's journey, let us include these qualities as we network with two worlds that they perceive as part of each other. Their communication, their commerce, their ideology, their societies are networked as one world. This arrangement has precedence but not that common. Their proximities are close enough to even include travel between them, with commerce and cultural exchange, and even population movements. They exist in a zone of the universe that harbors relationships that are more attuned to each other, which is how this began. They refer to each other as 'the Other'

rather than two distinct names, you see. So networking with these two must take on the connotation of they being one world.

Now, each have benefited from the advantages of each one's location and natural environment. So asking the question, "Which Other are we referring to?" the question is irrelevant. Their economies are linked, as well, benefiting each other. They are not of the human form, but exist quite naturally as somewhat rectangular beings, with a propensity to float, if you will, for the purpose of movement. They do not communicate with common speech such as humans. It is more telepathic, but only in part.

They are aware of your presence on this journey but do not see this as strange or unusual and have invited you to attend one of their councils, and we shall do so at this time. These councils are like community meetings, and this one has the agenda of better communication between the Others. There is a growing concern that they are not evolving into their potential as they might and they're feeling more 'stuck,' if you will, in their situation. Humanity would do well to consider this as well! Namaste.

The Harmony world: Appreciate harmony wherever you find it June 9, 2014

JANU: An interesting destination, this Harmony world, for it reveals a viable model for living: the society that lives in True Peace with more unlimited adventure in life. This harmony we speak of extends even to the animal and plant kingdom of this world, and the result of that cooperation is the health and well-being of all involved. Life does not need death and destruction to find a population balance. It does so through the inner instincts of procreation, not obsessed with this, as humanity is, but more natural about it. For they understand and live the balance and harmony, within all of its environment.

As far as religion and deities go, they honor life and each other and the potential for the evolution of creation and the richness and experience that affords. They do not perceive in limited terms, for in their world and life of balance and harmony everyone's needs are met, one way or another. So their reach into grander discoveries is not from a sense of lack, but a sense of adventure and a love of life.

Consider how much of human society is consumed with protection, warnings, devices, police forces, military, for no other reason than to control themselves, from without rather than from within. Where is the inner mastery, responsibility, and love for each other? Humanity has a life in fear under the surface of your quest for peace. Some human endeavors reach for this harmony and the beauty of it, through some forms of music creation, art, design, architecturally, and organizations to help the deprived. Humanity has within its midst solutions to its conflicts and obsessions, but sees the potential for conflict as powerful and overwhelming. Much confusion here.

So observing harmony and understanding it and its result wherever possible can be the path to freedom and True Peace. Let us continue these observations. Namaste.

A world both physical and non-physical June 21, 2014

JANU: Exploring other worlds is a constant in awakening to a larger life. As you realize, worlds are not the only location for sentient life that is evolving. Many realities exist with varying conditions for sentient life. We have explored a few. Exploring worlds is more easily relatable, but in time human consciousness will embrace other realities of life as well.

For today's journey, let us partake of a world in a sector of the universe that is a fringe existence, straddling almost, if you will, multiple realities. Some physical worlds in this region are keenly aware of the co-existence of realities and have grown in the ability to manipulate and direct their consciousness to appreciate these other realities. There is one world in particular that has mastered this ability.

This world is a green world, of nature, of vegetation, and the beings there relate to each other, more closely resembling the cultures in these other realities, or at least one or two in particular. They are conscious energetically and reproduction, here and there, is through energy manipulation and manifestation of the structures. These beings have a reddish hue and are not humanoid. Their physical appearance reflects their ability to manipulate the causal energies of their existence such that it is quite easy for them to slip in and out of a particular form. With communication, it is at times telepathic, but at times more 'direct knowing.'

We do not see a name for this world. Humanity would find this existence too confusing, seemingly nothing to hang your hat on, if you will. Yes, this world has mass, density, but it is not fixed. It is a peaceful world that enjoys its state of evolution. Their relationship with their world is symbiotic to a very high degree. Nothing taken for granted, as with the Earth and humanity. Namaste.

The new Earth

July 11, 2014

JANU: We are changing course then this morning as a result of a venue of opportunity calling on our attention. This venue we speak of prevails and dominates the emerging life on new worlds and the reappearance of life on others.

There is a new world in your vicinity where the new life exists and is, if you will, in its incubation period. It belongs to a region of stars in your equatorial sky. It is embryonic to the point where one would be hard pressed to predict species, but many of the beings to incarnate are from the Earth, for a reason. Humanity's consciousness is not ready yet for such responsibility of oversight and guidance, but humanity will have a bond, a common footing with this new species and will be ready when it's time.

By design, this species will advance quickly, becoming more conscious even than humanity is at this point. Much to come of this, our brother. In a very limited way, let us refer to this as the 'new Earth,' for connection purposes.

Universal Exploration: Non-physical realities and a world from the past

July 17, 2014

JANU: For this morning's journey, we will embark upon a path that includes surveying another world that used to be in your vicinity, meaning your solar system. This world is a traveler, or was. Not sustained by a solar body, but sustained from within. Yes, it was a rogue world, artificially populated, with some surface but mostly subterranean habitation. The beings who populated this world, when it was nearby, have long since gone. This world now approaches the edge of your galaxy, soon to be lost from the galaxy to the larger universe. The significance of this find, this observation, is that the universe is far vaster in complexity than your science knows of.

There are platforms of life that co-exist with the physical universe, having more to do with energy coalescences, functioning by way of energy densities, patterns, and integrities of energy interactions spawning new forms of energy conducive to maintaining beings of consciousness not functioning physically. When we speak of and explore other realities, other realms of existence, they are not off somewhere distant, but co-existing in energetic relationships, in realities that flow and move and change shape—if ‘shape’ can be applied here. Where you view galaxies in this physical universe as vast distances of separation, unattainable for exploration in any lifetime, this does not apply in the realities of which we speak. Size and distance and place have their correlations; however, these are not limitations but features.

One reason for this exploration is to reveal to humanity that life is vast and complex and varied and the transition from physicality by your consciousness, your True Nature, your being, introduces you to, once more, a larger life. So the path of discovery, wonder, and joy of many realities awaits. Now, transition is not the only way to step on this path, for as you release the identification of being physical, human, your consciousness adapts. Life does not require you to shut down awareness to be incarnate. This is of your choosing, as is the alternative.

How does one relate, then, to non-physical reality, non-physical life, formless existence? It is by relating to your own True Nature and choosing to perceive as who you truly are, what you truly are. Incarnate conditioning makes this seem impossible. It is not. Love this experience into your consciousness. Namaste.

Exploring non-physical life

Jan. 5, 2015

JANU: We are enabling, if you will, that ability to converse with other worlds. Not a new ability for you but re-awakened.

Let us focus our attention then upon a world that exists nine parsecs from the Earth in a region of space behind a cloud of stellar material, which makes it difficult for either world to observe the other physically. This world would appear a bit gray and almost lifeless. Life in the vicinity of this world has the ability to manifest itself in and out of a range of subtle realities. This will be an opportunity to explore non-physical realities of life. The faculties of perception, of awareness, humans call ‘the five senses’ are not used in these realities. This is a major threshold in perception of life, which we will explore carefully, so let go of our own frames of reference. Namaste.

Exploring other physical realities

May 12, 2015 B

JANU: For this evening’s journey, let us partake of a new vista. And the vista we choose: the reality in the larger life of the role physicality plays in a non-physical life. Understand this. There are many different physical realities. The one of your current experience is one of many. Now, the laws of life, the parameters of existence, are quite different and need to be, for the range of life reality non-physically is vast as well. And physicality plays a role interfacing with these many other realities. So physicality must have many more realities.

So there is a worthy journey to explore and understand other physical realities and how they differ and how they contribute to, participate in, the larger life. Much talk of alternate universes, parallel universes, alternate existence, and dimensions. We shall explore this further and you will learn to let go of what you think you understand of only one element of physical life. Physicality will have new meanings. Namaste.
